INDICATIONS THAT BONUS BILL WILL PASS THIS WEEK

Measure Probably Will Be Vetoed by President but Promptly Made a Law Notwithstanding.

SHIP SUBSIDY HAS SMALL CHANCE NOW

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
(Copyright, 1922.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The legislative situation gets more muddled daily. Now it begins to look as if the tariff will be tied up indefinitely in conference between the House and Senate and may without any deliberate effort on anybody's part still be under consideration when the people go to the polls in November.

As for the bonus and ship subsidy, the latter has little chance in the present melee and will get more votes after the election. The bonus, or adjusted compensation bill, as the American Legion leaders prefer to have it described, will be passed this week.

There is no doubt that the votes in favor of the bill are greatly in excess of those against it. The only question now is whether the Senate will cast more than a two-thirds vote in favor of the measure. Some of the friends of the bill believe if the bill passes by a two-thirds vote, the futility of a veto will have been so conspicuously demonstrated that President Harding will not wish to risk being overridden by his party.

Intimations to Contrary.

Every statement and intimation from the White House, however, has been directly to the contrary, and the President is said to have exhibited much impatience recently when one of his callers brought the information that the Senate was expecting him to shift his position and sign the bill after all.

If the Senate really expects that, the measure must be modified considerably to provide a justification for a change of the presidential mind. The chances are President Harding will veto the bill and that it will be promptly made a law over his veto, as two-thirds are available in both houses.

In the face of the known disapproval by President Harding of the bonus measure and the repeated statements of Treasury officials that the bill would add something like $4,000,000,000 to the public debt, Congress is going ahead. To the average observer this must seem a curious state of affairs, but the truth is the members of Congress do not share the pessimism of the officials of the executive branch of the Government. They expect the country somehow to carry the burden and they insist especially in their private talks on the subject that the refunding operations of the Government are being carried on much more smoothly than the public knows and that the financial capacity of the nation to absorb the new debt is greater than is commonly supposed. It is true that the Government has managed since the armistice to reduce the public debt by more than $3,000,000,000, so that an increase of $4,000,000,000 will leave the country more or less in the same position as it was when the war ended.

Congress Will Not Bulge.

Members of Congress are of the opinion that the country can absorb the new indebtedness and should take a chance for the benefit of the soldier element. In other words, those in the Senate and House who favor the bill are stacking their judgment of the future against that of the Secretary of the Treasury and the President and are tenaciously clinging to their own opinion. No amount of argument from the executive or his advisers can budge Congress. Its mind is set and the votes are pledged. The rest is purely perfunctory. The only chance of defeating the measure is after a presidential veto, but even this will be discounted the moment the votes are counted in the Senate, for it will show conclusively how many votes there are short of or in excess of the required two-thirds.

Politically speaking, the adjusted compensation measure is a doubtful quantity. Both Democrats and Republicans are afraid to antagonize the soldier vote, and yet they know that the passage of the adjusted compensation bill will just about kill all hope of a reduction of taxes in the next five or six years, as the sums needed for the bill are progressively

BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS ASKED TO HELP FIGHT SOLDIER BONUS BILL

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.

BUSINESS organizations throughout the country were asked to help oppose the soldiers' bonus in a letter yesterday by Julius H. Barnes, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who declared proposed bonus legislation would increase the liabilities of the Government beyond any point reported in the history of the country."

He requested business organizations to make known immediately their attitude in connection with the bonus.

SYMPATHY STRIKE NOT TO BE CALLED, SAY 'BIG 4' CHIEFS

Leaders Say There Is No Danger of the Railroad Brotherhoods Being Drawn Into Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 21.—There is no danger of the "Big Four" railroad transportation brotherhoods being drawn into a sympathetic strike even should negotiations to end the strike of the shop crafts workers fail.

This was the declaration made by Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, on their return to their homes late yesterday from New York and Washington, where for 10 days they have attempted to mediate the shopmen's controversies.

Neither would comment on the progress of the negotiations.

Asked what position the brotherhoods will be in if the negotiations fail, Stone said they "will be in the same position they were in before. The strike will simply go on."

No Sympathetic Strike Considered.

"There has never been any sympathetic strike, nor any considered," he continued. "There are safety laws to take care of the defective equipment which would endanger the lives of brotherhood members and it will only be necessary to enforce these laws."

Commenting on the orders of President Harding to the Interstate Commerce Commission to withdraw all trains which do not fully comply with the laws, he replied.

"If the Federal inspectors can keep a close enough check they will withdraw many trains. I would rather not talk about that yet, however."

Stone and Robertson plan to return to New York Tuesday night to be present when the railway executives consider peace proposals Wednesday.

Officers of the railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor yesterday denied all knowledge of instructions reported sent by B. M. Jewell, head of the striking shop crafts, telling general chairmen to hold themselves in readiness to call off the strike. Shop crafts officials said it was impossible that Jewell could have sent the telegram reported received at Ardmore, Ok., by John Scags, who said he was union representative at Gainsville, Tex.

Text of Alleged Message.

"This is to serve notice to call together all members and hold them in readiness to return to their places ordered vacated by July 1," read the telegram that was telephoned to Ardmore from a man who said he was Scags.

"We want no delay in getting back on jobs. We are confident call will be not later than Monday. The message had Jewell's name signed to it, and was addressed to all general chairmen of the federated shop crafts.

Shop crafts officials said that in case a decision was reached to call off the strike, it would not be according to union procedure for Jewell to send such a telegram and even had he sent it, it would have been in code or would have been preceded by code messages.

The name of the man who said he received the message is not listed among the general chairman, John Scott, secretary of the Federated Shop Crafts said.

Jewell Denies Sending Message Indicating End of Strike.

FRANCE DEMANDS GERMAN MINES FOR MORATORIUM

Premier Says Consent Will Be Dependent on Placing Ruhr and National Forest State Mines in Allied Hands

"BROAD EUROPEAN POLICY WELCOMED"

"We Ask Nothing Better Than to Resume Pleasant Relations," Premier Poincare Declares.

By the Associated Press.

BAR DE LUC, France, Aug. 21.—France will not consent to a moratorium of any character to Germany unless the German State mines of the Ruhr and the national forest are placed in the hands of the allies as a guarantee, and no matter what happens, France will not depart from this policy.

Such was the position of the French Government with regard to the reparations question as outlined this afternoon by Premier Poincare at the opening session of the general counsel of the Meuse. The Premier's speech had been awaited with great eagerness in allied circles, since it has been generally accepted that the definite and final position of France would be outlined in this address.

The day Germany recognizes loyally her obligations toward France and carries them out with good grace," declared M. Poincare, "we will not refuse to examine with her the best methods of assuring the prompt and regular execution of the treaty of Versailles."

Neither Neroes Nor Bismarcks.

"Contrary to certain British spokesmen," continued the head of the French Cabinet, "we are neither Neroes, nor even Bismarcks. We are simply a good people who were brutally attacked and whose native soil was ravaged. All we ask is the opportunity to continue in peace our daily tasks.

"We are greatly disposed to aid other nations in the effort to restore the world. We know the world does not end at our frontiers. We welcome a broad and generous European policy. We desire to remain allies of our allies and friends of our friends. We ask nothing better than to resume with our enemies of yesterday, pleasant and courteous relations. But we wish to have our ruins repaired—and they will be."

Ridicules Charges.

Premier Poincare ridiculed recent charges in certain German quarters that France sought to enslave the German people in revenge for the devastation wrought during the war.

"If contrary to our desires, we are forced to take independent action without the approval of our allies," he continued, "we shall make no effort to retain indefinitely the guarantees which we may take. We shall guard these guarantees in the interest of all, and only until Germany consents to met her just obligations."

FOLK ON WAY TO RECOVERY, HIS PHYSICIAN STATES

Marked Improvement in Former Governor's Condition Reported Evidenced Since Yesterday.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Former Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, who has been ill at his home in Washington for several days, was today well forward on the road to recovery according to a statement to the Post-Dispatch by his physician, Dr. M. W. Perry.

Marked improvement in his condition, Dr. Perry said, began to be evidenced yesterday morning. Dr. Perry denied a report that the former Governor's illness, which two days ago reached a stage alarming to his friends, was caused by uremic poisoning. His condition the physician added was due wholly to a nervous breakdown brought on by overwork.

Dr. Perry said that while the patient's recent improvement had been very "gratifying" it was desirable that he should remain inactive for several days longer.

2 NEW WARRANTS AGAINST RENSHAW CHARGING FORGERY

RETIRED DRUGGIST MAKES CHARGES

Two more warrants charging forgery of promissory notes and mortgages were issued today at Belleville against H. T. Renshaw, president of the J. W. Renshaw's Sons Real Estate and Insurance Co., of East St. Louis, which has failed with liabilities estimated at $250,000 to $300,000.

The warrants issued today were on complaint of Michael Sondag, a retired druggist of East St. Louis, who alleged that Renshaw sold his sister, Miss Martha Sondag, a forged and counterfeit promissory note and mortgage in April, 1921, on a flat at 803-05 Summit avenue, East St. Louis, and his brother, Servais Sondag, a $4000 forged and counterfeit mortgage on two lots in East St. Louis, in March, 1921. The mortgage sold to Miss Martha Sondag was purported to have been executed by Benjamin and Annie Vodde, and the one to Servais Sondag, by Dr. Francis W. Kirsch, 2900 North Union boulevard, this city.

The signatures of the Voddes and those of Otto Weibert, Recorder of Deeds, and his deputy, William Metzger, are also alleged to have been forged.

Sontag told newspaper men that he has ascertained that Renshaw had sold three $4000 mortgages against the Summit avenue flat, two of which have been found to be forgeries.

Renshaw was arrested last week on a warrant sworn to by another man charging that he had purchased a promissory note and mortgage for $2500 which, he learned after the firm's failure, had been forged and was without value.

Trustees liquidating the affairs of the firm have stated that paper of this kind found among the firm's effects may amount to $50,000.

A suit was filed in the East St. Louis City Court today by Miss Mary Ganey, 620 Ohio avenue, against Mary L. Mayo and Willis Mayo, her husband, who reside at 639 North Twenty-fourth street, East St. Louis, to foreclose a $1500 mortgage on lot 18, at Trendley Heights, mortgaged by the Mayos to Miss Ganey Oct. 28, 1914. She alleges that the principal, due Oct. 28, 1917, had not been paid.

Mrs. Mayo maintains that this mortgage was liquidated in 1916 when she gave to Harry T. Renshaw, trustee of the property, a note for $3000, payable in three years with semi-annual interest at 6 per cent. She said records at Belleville and of the J. W. Renshaw's Sons Real Estate Co. would show that she had paid the full $3000 in December, 1919.

DOG TRIES IN VAIN TO SAVE A MAN FROM DROWNING

Samuel Forbstine, 30 years old, a bartender, residing over a cafe at 108 North Fourteenth street, where he was employed, was drowned in the Missouri River one and one-half miles south of St. Charles, at 5:30 yesterday afternoon, despite the efforts of a companion and a dog to rescue him.

Forbstine was visiting the Crystal Springs Farm with Frank Washburn, one of the proprietors, and the two men had gone swimming. Forbstine was seized with cramps, and Washburn was unable to rescue him, being dragged under in two attempts. Washburn's dog swam out to Forbstine, caught him by one arm and attempted to tow him to the bank. The dog let go after being pulled under three times, Washburn said.

Forbstine's body was recovered at 12:45 this afternoon by men who had been dragging the river. It was a short distance from the spot where Forbstine went down.

NO EVIDENCE FOUND IN CHICAGO RAID OF VIOLENCE PLOTS

DOCUMENTS SEIZED IN FOSTER'S OFFICE

Raid Followed Wreck of Express Train Near Gary, Ind., in Which Two Men Were Killed.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Investigation of the Trade Union Educational League, headed by W. Z. Foster, who conducted the 1919 steel strike, was ended this afternoon so far as the State's Attorney's office was concerned, Assistant State's Attorney W. F. McLaughlin announced. Examination of the papers seized in the league's office in a raid disclosed no evidence that Foster has advocated violence in connection with the railroad shopmen's strike or otherwise, McLaughlin said.

Agents of the local branch of the Bureau of Investigation of the Federal Department of Justice were sent to Gary today to make an inquiry into the wreck of an express train yesterday which railroad investigations charged was caused by loosening of rails.

In addition to the efforts of Federal and railroad agents, State's Attorney Crowe was seeking evidence in Chicago to determine whether or not strike violence or radicalism was involved in the wreck.

Foster Not Being Sought.

Foster was said to have appeared for a brief moment at his office this morning, but left immediately. He was not being sought and no charges were pending against him, McLaughlin said.

Offices of the Trades Union Educational League were raided and correspondence and private papers of Foster were seized by State's Attorney Crowe and detectives late last night.

List of Radicals Found.

No arrests were made at the time of the raid, but a long list of names of radical leaders was unearthed, Crowe announced.

The State's Attorney's investigation began immediately after the report of the Michigan Central wreck at Gary was received here, along with the report by railroad officials that the train had been deliberately ditched by plotters. Spikes were removed from ties and rails loosened, railroad officials said.

The express train, the engineer and fireman of which were killed when engine and cars piled up in the Indiana sand, was running five hours late and an hour ahead of one of the fastest, the New York-Chicago limited. It was believed the plotters planned to wreck the passenger train.

Reports of a dozen meetings addressed by Foster in cities of the Middle West were received, the State's Attorney said.

Door Battered Down.

Detectives battered down the door of the league's offices. Inside they seized letter files, cards, indices, books, pamphlets, pictures of Lenine, Trotzky, soviet leaders of Russia. The evidence filled a truck. It included a complete list of meetings held by Foster, the raiders said.

A memorandum book labeled "credential list" and seized in the raid contained more than 100 names of persons to whom "credentials" of the league had been given.

There were listed among others three who were among the communists convicted with William Bross Lloyd, wealthy leader of the communist party.

Frequent allusion was made in the letter to the work of the league among railroad workers. Several letters were from radical leaders in England and Germany.

After the wrecking of express train No. 39, New York to Chicago, near Gary, in the deliberate removal of 27 spikes from one of the rails, it was derailed, Michigan Central Railroad officials offered a $1000 reward for the arrest of those responsible.

An investigation by Martin Quinn, special agent of the road, revealed that while the roadbed had been ground into an unrecognizable mass from the spot where the train had left the rails, enough remained at the place where the engine had been thrown from its course to furnish evidence of the work of the train wreckers. Everything ahead of the gap, however, had been destroyed.

Wreck Mile East of Gary.

The wreck took place about a mile east of Gary at 2:10 a. m., while the train, which carried no passengers,

BILL FOR FACT-FINDING COAL COMMISSION OFFERED

Chairman of House Commerce Committee Carries Out President's Recommendation—Somewhat Similar Bill Before Senate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—A bill to carry into effect President Harding's recommendations for a sweeping Government investigation of the coal industry was introduced today by Chairman Winslow of the House Commerce Committee after a visit to the White House.

The measure would create a commission of nine members to be known as the United States Coal Commission, for the purpose of obtaining information regarding all questions and problems arising out of and connected with the coal industry. No members of Congress or any person who has any interest in or is connected with the industry would be eligible to serve on the commission. The salary of commissioners would be at the rate of $10,000 and the commission would cease to exist one year after the act took effect.

Specifically the bill would make it the duty of the commission "to investigate and ascertain facts in the coal industry, as the ownership of mines, price of coal, wages, wage contracts, conditions of employment, distribution, waste of coal, profits realized by owners or operators of coal mines or by the persons or corporations having to do with the production, distribution or sale of coal, and any other material facts in connection with coal industry generally and the organizations and persons connected with it."

The commission would report to the President and Congress by Jan. 1, 1923, its findings of fact and make such recommendations as in its judgment would "promote continuity of production and efficiency in mining and distribution, and maintain uninterrupted movement of coal in interstate commerce and safeguard the interests of workers, operators and the public."

The sum of $500,000 would be appropriated for expenses of the commission.

Coincidentally with presentation of the bill in the House, Chairman Borah of the Senate Labor Committee issued a call for a meeting of his committee tomorrow to take up the President's recommendation for a coal fact-finding commission. Senator Borah hopes to get action on his own bill, which the President has approved in the main, but which differs in some respects from the Winslow measure. The Senator today said he would propose amendments to meet suggestions by the President. The principal one would be a commission of five members instead of three. Senator Borah also plans to eliminate, as suggested by the President, provisions of his original bill, requiring one of the members to come from the coal industry and another from the ranks of the coal unions. The President, it was said, did not desire to have his choice restricted.

A bill to create a Federal coal corporation with a revolving fund with power to buy and sell coal and thus affect prices is said to be in process of drafting at the Department of Commerce for transmission to the Senate and House Interstate Commerce Committees.

MATHILDE M'CORMICK BELIEVED TO BE MARRIED

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
(Copyright, 1922.)

PARIS, Aug. 21.—Miss Mathilde McCormick and her "educated gentleman lover of strong personality and character, of good birth and blood and respected as a worthy citizen of his country"—this description of Max Oser is Dudley Field Malone's—probably have been secretly married.

That, at least, is the impression gained by a Post-Dispatch correspondent who searched Switzerland for them in vain.

It appears they are already far off the beaten track and may be honeymooning somewhere in Italy on the Riviera or in the mountains of French Savoy. Probably they are in the latter district, as they were seen in Evain-les-Bains, on the French side of Lake Geneva, last Thursday just as they were about to depart.

This is the only clew developed in a search that took in Basel, Zurich, Lucerne, Berne, Lausanne, Geneva and Evain. Oser's riding school in Zurich is deserted and inquiries as to his matrimonial intentions only brought forth smiles.

It is extremely unlikely they are still in Switzerland. That country is so devoid of tourists today that they would have been found easily. Also there is a technical difficulty in the way of a swift marriage, such as theirs is supposed to have been, in Switzerland. This is not so in Italy or France, and it is said official announcement of their wedding will be made only after the honeymoon is over.

The technical difficulty in the way of a swift marriage in Switzerland consists of the legal requirement that public notice of the marriage be posted two weeks in advance. In this case it would have to be posted in Basle, Oser's legal residence.

PROTESTS AGAINST $4.50 COAL

Water Commissioner Thinks $3 Enough at Mines in Kentucky.

Water Commissioner Wall today recommended to Mayor Kiel that he write a letter to Federal Fuel Distributor Spencer, at Washington, protesting against the $4.50 a ton rate which the Government has set on Kentucky coal.

In his recommendation, Wall said the city purchased coal of the same kind from Kentucky at $3.25 a ton in May, buying 5000 tons at that price. His contention is that under the present conditions a fair price would not exceed $3 a ton, and recommends that this price be suggested to Spencer in the Mayor's communication. Should the $4.50 rate prevail, the cost a ton delivered at St. Louis would be $6.37, the freight rate being $1.87 a ton.

LOREN MURCHISON SUED FOR DIVORCE

Wife Alleges Champion Sprinter Was Engrossed in Business and Athletics.

Mrs. Geneva Murchison of 4008 Hartford street filed suit in the Circuit Court today against Loren Murchison, world's champion sprinter, now running under the Illinois Athletic Club colors, alleging that he left her July 25 and went to Chicago.

They were married April 2, 1919. Mrs. Murchison says her husband was engrossed in business and athletics, was cold and indifferent, and exhibited no love toward her, and finally told her that he did not care for married life, and suggested that, as they could not get along together, they had better separate.

Mrs. Murchison says that her husband, while staying at the Illinois Athletic Club, received letters from several women.

She says Murchison has a national reputation as an athlete and earns $400 a month. She asks for the restoration of her maiden name, Whitley.

Murchison, formerly a McKinley High School athlete, holds the indoor championship for the 60-yard dash and has been champion at 300 yards indoors and 220 yards outdoors. He has challenged Charlie Paddock, "world's fastest sprinter," but his challenge has not been accepted. He was defeated at Detroit Saturday night in 100 and 220 yard races.

HOPE FOR END OF ILLINOIS COAL STRIKE BY TOMORROW

Both Miners and Operators in Chicago Conference Express Optimism Over Chance of Reaching a Satisfactory Settlement by That Time.

OPERATORS GIVE IN TO SOME EXTENT

Kavanaugh Says Outside Pressure Is Being Brought to Bear Upon Operators and Early Settlement Is in Prospect.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Hope for an agreement between Illinois coal operators and miners by tomorrow was expressed by both sides shortly after noon today. It was announced officially that the operators had to some extent receded from their position on arbitration.

The announcement came only a short time after the negotiations at the session of a subcommittee were said to have reached a snag. But the expression of hopefulness was taken to mean that the earlier hitch in proceedings since had been minimized.

Operators Recede.

Only the briefest information was given out following the subcommittee session. As leaders of operators and miners came from the conference room they stated that the operators had in a measure receded on the arbitration question although there was no indication that some form of arbitration or mediation had been definitely dropped.

"There is some hope for an agreement by tomorrow," were substantially the words of leaders on both sides which turned the earlier gloomy aspect of the negotiations to a much brighter one.

It was announced that the subcommitee would resume its sessions tomorrow at 11 a. m. In the meantime the full committee of operators deferred a meeting it had expected to hold with its members of the subcommittee.

Coal Supplies Low.

Present coal suplies in Illinois are insufficient to supply even the essential industries and household requirements in priority classes, and, Robert Medill, state fuel distributer, announced today. Medill said he had been forced to return applications for coal for classes falling below the first two categories in view of the depleted fuel supplies.

W. K. Kavanaugh of St. Louis, head of the Fifth and Ninth District operators, said that outside pressure was being brought to bear upon the operators and that a settlement of the Illinois coal strike was in prospect within a few days. The city of St. Louis, Kavanaugh said, has about six days' supply of coal on hand to run its public utilities and that the railroads were commencing to feel the coal strike more keenly.

St. Louis is greatly interested in negotiations for settlement of the coal strike in Illinois because the Illinois fields are the source of its normal coal supply. During the strike some coal has been received from the Kentucky and Alabama fields. The needs of this city are not met by the partial settlement effected last week at Cleveland because the parties to that agreemnt dispose of their output in other parts of the country.

Both Sides in Philadelphia Conference Urged to Make Concessions.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—Representatives of anthracite workers and of the men who operate the mines assembled here again today for another session of the negotiations to reconcile the differences between the two factions which have kept the hard coal mines idle since April 1. Today's meeting is scheduled for 4 p. m.

Aside from the personal interest in solving the problem, the negotiators returned to Philadelphia after a Sunday in the country or at the seashore, each facing his pressure from constituents on both sides. For

NATION'S CONCERN IS WORLD PEACE, HARDING SAYS

President Favors Military Training for 100,000 Annually, but Not for Armed Warfare.

REVIEWS CAMP MEADE MEN AT WASHINGTON

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—President Harding, in an address here today to citizen soldiers from Camp Meade, Md., declared he favored military training "for more than 100,000" civilians annually, not for any prospective aggressive warfare, but to preserve peace.

After reviewing the civilian troops on the ellipse, adjacent to the White House grounds, the President called attention to the fact that 28,000 civilians were afforded training this summer, compared with 11,000 last year. The President said the review had given him new confidence, but added that there was not a thought in America for armed warfare, the nation being concerned only in preserving the peace of the world.

President's Address.

His address follows:

"I could not allow the opportunity to pass without a word of felicitation and congratulations. You have afforded us this morning, those who were in review and those who carried on the review, a most impressive and reassuring spectacle. You are citizens of a republic wholly devoted to peace. There is not a thought in America of armed warfare. There is not a design on the part of your country to carry on an armed campaign in any direction.

"We are concerned only with peace and the security of peace and I like to think that this great republic, reducing its regular army in accordance with its ideals, can have the assurance that comes to it with such a spectacle as you have given us this morning.

"It is a fine thing for the young manhood of America to turn from the ordinary engagements of the vacation season to a study of military service and training for service. I am not sure, however, but you have profited quite as well as your country. If my eye testifies correctly you have benefited from the physical training, which always means a higher estate of American manhood. You have benefited by learning discipline. You have benefited as all America might well benefit by learning a little more impressively the obligations of the citizen to his country.

"It is a rather interesting thing modern science has learned that the ills of the nervous and mental being may largely be cured by the development of the physical being, and I take it that you have not only had a wholesome time but that you are all returning to your nrmal pursuits better equipped for the tasks of life.

"Solely for Defense."

"You will be interested to know that the volunteer citizens' training movement last year enlisted about 11,000 recruits. This year there were 28,000 of you in the various camps. If I could have my wish this number would increase until more than 100,000 were annually studying and preparing for armed service, not that we ever expect to be called upon for such service, but solely for national defense and the preservation of the Government under which we all live.

MAN, 78, FOUND DEAD IN BED

Wesley Darden, 78 years old, a traveling salesman, who has been living in Cedar Hill, Tenn., Corpus Christi, Tex., and Eureka Springs, Ark., for several years, was found dead in bed this morning at a rooming house at 1621 Olive street. It is believed that he died of the infirmities of age.

His son, J. Mack Darden of 929 North Sarah street, one of the police department surgeons, identified the body. Darden came to St. Louis, it is believed, to visit his son, and is supposed to have met an old friend who took him to the rooming house. The widow, Mrs. Frances Darden, who lives in Eureka Springs, has been notified. Darden formerly was a grocery salesman. Later he was in the real estate business in Texas. The funeral will be held here.

PRINCETON, Ind., Aug. 21.—Yardmen of the St. Louis-Louisville line of the Southern Railway at Princeton, Ind., who had been on strike since Saturday morning, have returned to work and freight and passenger traffic, which had been tied up, is restored.

Story of Leg of Hinton Flight Typed in Moving Plane 3500 Feet in Air

Correspondent Sits on Oil Can and Places Typewriter on Suitcase Standing Endwise to Tell How Brazil-Bound Flyers Weather Storms.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 21. — Lieut. Walter Hinton, on his giant seaplane, the Sampaio Correia, hopped off at West Palm Beach this morning at 10:15, expecting to reach Nassau in two hours. The pilot and crew had a good rest last night and with the plane's machinery working satisfactorily and weather conditions favorable, they hoped to make a pleasant voyage over the gulf stream to the Bahamas. The ultimate destination is Brazil, 5500 miles from New York.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Aug. 20 (Sunday).—In a few minutes we are going to spiral down West Palm Beach for the night. The exact time of landing I shall insert when I go ashore to file this telegram (we landed at 6:26 New York time). This is being typed at an altitude of 3500 feet with my typewriter on a suitcase standing endwise and held between my legs. I am sitting on an inverted oil can in the amidships cockpit and riding backwards.

The start from this point will be made early tomorrow. San Juan, Porto Rico, probably will be the stopover place Monday night.

The Sampaio-Carreia, giant seaplane, showed clearly today what she can do with a little encouragement. Shortly after we left Charleston, S. C., at 8:24 (New York time) a 15-mile gale got behind our tail, enabling us to speed up to 95 miles an hour. Savannah, Ga., was so quickly reached, being on our beam, in 36 minutes, that Skipper Hinton himself was surprised. However, it was not all easy going. We had our usual head wind again shortly and the sky road off middle Florida evidently was rolled by a square-wheeled steam roller.

Air's First Kindness.

But many thanks for that early blow early this Sunday morning. It was the first kindness we have had from the air since leaving New York. Later on we did not object to the steady wind against us which we took at altitudes of from 200 to 4600 feet. An honest wind is to be respected. A treacherous one, armed with dirks and blackjacks and brass knuckles, such as we encountered Friday and Saturday, is to be despised by respectable society.

Though we were called out of bed at 5 a. m. this morning by the skipper, we did not get out to the "Longitude Express," bobbing at her anchorage in the Cooper River, until 7:30.

A cafe manager kept us waiting so long for breakfast and then treated us so insolently that we marched out in high dudgeon and wasted a half hour looking for another early morning cafe. But, once aboard the sky lugger, we were soon clearing her for weighing anchor.

The musical voice of Dr. Martins, our navigator, chanted "Yo He" as he and Tommy Baltzell, the Pathe camera man, drew in the anchor rope and coiled it tidily. Skipper Hinton and Mechanician Wilshusen were perspiringly pumping bilge water from the hull. I was at my task of taking down the engine and cockpit hatchway covers and storing them back in the tail.

No Smoking on Plane.

We have a watchman aboard every night when we go ashore, the first competent man that we can find. The man who guarded the plane last night wore a Prince Albert coat and certainly did not seem to need the $5 that Hinton paid him. These watchmen we engage are all required to show that they have no matches in their pockets. We are taking no chances with fire. Because of gasoline fumes in the fuselage, smoking is strictly "Verboten" on our Brazil-bound air cruiser.

The skipper grumbled at the delay in getting away. He said we would have to start getting up at 1 o'clock if it took us so long getting ready as we should be on our way at daybreak weather permitting.

"Here we are loaded for bear today" he said, "and we have lost two good hours."

We were loaded to capacity with gas and oil this morning and this great weight told when we tried to get off. On two long runs down the Cooper River, with the motors going full, we were unable to lift our tail out of the water. With all baggage and emergency cans of oil and gasoline shifted forward some in the bow and Wilshusen and me behind the pilots, we shook loose on the third run and were soon out to sea.

The weather was distinctly unfavorable but we came "smiling through." We made out five storm centers around us. Our complexions got the benefit of a rainwater soaking as we swung through the tail of a shower cloud. The sea was muddy color beneath us and of a leaden bullishness in the distance. The air was continually bumpy as we made altitude, but we were cheered by a gush of sunshine that caused an enormous semi-circular rainbow lardward.

Many Sounds Passed.

At 8:37, New York time, occurred our good luck, a change of the wind to due south our course and Wilshusen smashed his first forward to indicate the tremendous propulsion now forcing us on our way and he wrote me a note: "We are sure making knots." In my exhilaration I overlooked his slight grammatical error but it is not too late now to call attention to it. There was nothing worth describing during the morning off the dull Georgian and Floridan coasts. But we passed many octaves of sounds—St. Helena Sound, Port Royal sound, Wasaw sound, Ossawbaw sound, Saint Catherine sound, Sapelo sound, Doroy sound, Atamaha sound, Saint Simon sound, Saint Andrews sound, Cumberland sound, Nassau and others.

This familiarity of mine with our South Atlantic coast is only a pose. To confess the truth, I am continually slipping forward to borrow the day's hydrographic chart from our affable navigator.

In less than an hour our Good Samaritan, wind, got tired boosting us and fainted away, unless it was appalled by the dirty look it got from the cohorts of evil piling up in the empyrea ahead of us. Hinton, however, exchanged wicked frown for wicked frown and with a glitter in his eye made lip movements to this effect:

"Let 'em come. We will chew through whatever they offer."

The skipper's first gesture of defiance was to give his elevator a shove and we began climbing, and we lunched on cheese sandwiches to accumulate strength for the battle of emotions. At 10:22, New York time, the aft altimeter showed 3000 feet and we were still climbing. Baby cloudlets, just little soft dabs, and flapper clouds raced under us and the ship spared the women and children, though I was strongly tempted to grab several of the perverse maids by their bobbed hair and dash the wind out of them against our tail.

out in the coal fields and in the city offices of the operators there has been a growing conviction that the mines must be opened and the men put to work to save both sides. With approximately 155,000 anthracite workers in idleness, millions of dollars in wages are being lost, while mine property worth other millions is going to pieces and prospective buyers are clamoring to be supplied.

Both national and state governmental influences are being exerted upon the owners and operators to make every concession possible. Railroad interests which have been losing the profitable haulage of coal have added their complaints. Enough orders have been reported on hand in the collieries to keep the mines producing more than the normal amount for months.

Significance was placed on the fact that mine union leaders and operators arrived at a point in Saturday's session where terms of a possible contract were discussed. This was disclosed in the brief statement issued after the joint conference had adjourned, stating that the time of the meeting had been consumed in such a discussion. This was taken as an indication that the issues which created a virtual deadlock during the first two joint conferences had been removed by some sort of an agreement.

STATE COMMANDER CONTEST OCCUPIES LEGION CONVENTION

St. Louis Delegation Divided Between J. E. Kinkead of Fornfelt and Col. H. D. McBride of St. Louis.

"40 and 8" SOCIETY TO BE DISCUSSED

Admiral Coontz, Chief of Naval Operations, Speaks at Opening Session—Decorates Hannibal Woman.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HANNIBAL, Mo., Aug. 21.—The contest for State Commander seemed to be the chief discussion of 520 delegates assembling here today for the fourth annual convention of the Missouri department of the American Legion. The convention will close tomorrow night.

There are two candidates—J. E. Kinkead of Fornfelt and Col. H. D. McBride of St. Louis. The St. Louis delegation with 57 votes is sharply divided in its support. The organization strength of the St. Louis Legion, as represented by the City Executive Committee, is said to be supporting Kinkead and fostering a resolution withdrawing Legion sanction from a social organization known as the "Forty and Eight," of which Col. McBride is "chef de gare," or head for the State.

On the other hand the McBride following has prepared a resolution forbidding any Legion officer to publicly speak or write in support of any political candidate. Jerome F. Duggan, chairman of the St. Louis Executive Committee, spoke in support of Senator Reed at the Coliseum meeting with which Reed closed his primary campaign.

Relative Strength Indicated.

The relative strength of the two St. Louis factions is indicated by a vote in a delegation caucus last Monday night. Thirty-seven delegates, regarded as supporting the City Executive Committee, voted to be bound by a unit rule. Five posts, holding 12 votes, withdrew from the caucus and eight other posts having eight votes were not represented.

The St. Louis delegation further is interested in a resolution forbidding membership of Legionnaires in the Ku Klux Klan.

Just prior to the calling of the morning session, the Kansas City delegation split also on the unit rule and 26 of the 62 legionnaires walked out of the caucus.

Admiral Coontz Speaks.

Admiral R. E. Coontz, Chief of Naval Operations, a native of Hannibal, who was the chief speaker at the first session, urged that the Legion demand that as the best guarantee of peace the navy be kept at a "respectable figure." He said that many persons believed that as soon as the Washington conference closed that all naval activity would cease. He said that the naval limitations treaty was not yet in force, though the Government was making an honest effort to keep down armament expenditures. At the close of his talk, Admiral Coontz presented a distinguished service medal of the Near East Relief to Mrs. Nettie Hall Austin of Hannibal, Mo., who spent three years in Southern Russia and Asia Minor.

At a meeting of the State Executive Committee last night, the retiring State Commander, Harry E. Parker of Warrensburg, said that the chief recommendation of his retiring address would be that the State Commander be paid a salary of $1000 a year to cover traveling expenses. The commander now receives no salary.

Parker also recommended that in the future the State conventions of the Legion and of the Women's Auxiliary of the State be held simultaneously in the same city. He urged that the hospitalization report for the Ninth District, comprising Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, as prepared by the Legion's committee headed by Col. McBride, be adopted.

The committee also voted to recommend the continuance of the Legion's state monthly publication, The Missouri Legionnaire, four numbers of which have appeared, and to recommend that dues be increased 25 cents a year to support the publication. The committee also will recommend that the publication be under the direction of a board to hold office permanently unless removed for cause.

St. Louis Recommendations.

St. Louis recommendations for its representation on various committees follow: State committee, Bennett C. Clark and Otto Schultz; resolutions, Joseph P. McGowan and Christy M. Farrar; credentials, Joseph J. Noonan and John L. Kickham; constitution, Robert J. Kratzky and M. H. Doyne.

The St. Louis delegation chairman is Frank G. Jonah, formerly a Colonel in the Twelfth Engineer regiment and now chief engineer of the Frisco Railroad. The St. Louis delegation includes the only woman so far appearing at the convention, Miss Anna Robinson of Quentin Roosevelt Post No. 1, who served with Hospital Unit No. 21 overseas and who now is a nurse in the Jewish Hospital.

SENATOR M'CORMICK IS HOPEFUL OF SETTLEMENT OF RAILWAY SHOP STRIKE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.

WHILE union officers maintained the situation was too critical to indulge in speculation concerning a settlement, Senator Medill McCormick, who arrived in Chicago from the East, in a statement, said he was hopeful of settlement.

"I talked to a man who attended the meeting between brotherhood executive and railroad officers in New York last week," Senator McCormick said, "and this man said that a settlement of the strike within a week seemed assured, as a result of the New York meetings."

COAL MOVING MORE RAPIDLY FUEL COMMITTEE REPORTS

Public Utilities Said to Be in Good Shape—200 Cars of Coal Reach City Over Weekend.

No immediate need exists for asking the Chamber of Commerce to take steps to obtain coal in large quantities for essential industries, here, it was declared this morning at a meeting of the St. Louis Fuel Distribution Committee. More than 200 cars of coal were reported as reaching St. Louis over the weekend, while coal in transit is moving more rapidly than for more than a week. Public utilities were said to be in good shape.

The committee announced that when the coal now in transit, ordered for the most part in July, had been received, the essential industries must look for further relief through the operation of priority orders, handled by the committee.

A resolution was received at the meeting from the Coal Service Bureau, comprising dealers handling about 60 per cent of the retail coal here, in which the committee was asked to make its rulings apply to users of electric current as well as of coal. The resolution declared injustice was being done because concerns not in the priority classes were restricted in getting coal, while the same type of firm, using electric current, could operate, although consuming coal indirectly. The committee will reply that it has no power over the use of current by any firm.

PARK BENJAMIN DIES AT 74

Father-in-Law Succumbs to Heart Disease.

REAL BEER STILL BEING SOLD AT JOHNSTOWN

City Said to Have "Hang-Over" Today as Result of Mayor's "Permit."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 21.—Saloons here still were selling "good beer" with a kick today. Business was first-rate during the morning hours. The sale of beer is expected to continue until Government agents close the saloons. Prohibition enforcement agents were "rarin" to go early in the day, but are awaiting definite instructions from Washington before acting.

Johnstown is nursing a "hang-over" this morning. Residents of the Conemaugh Valley drank their fill of pre-Volstead bee Saturday and Saturday night. Many took large supplies home for use yesterday.

Mayor May Resign.

O. R. Stiffler, ousted group head of the Johnstown district Federal prohibition enforcement agents, has left the city. He is believed to be in Washington seeking reinstatement. He has a strong following here.

Mayor Cauffiel, whose spectacular action late last week in permitting the sale of beer has stirred Federal authorities in Washington and the good people here, may resign. Political foes and the church element are after him hot and heavy. "They can have this job any time they want it," the Mayor said.

Came at Critical Moment.

Coming at this time just as the most intense political campaign in the history of Pennsylvania is opening up before the fall elections, the action of Mayor Cauffiel has thrown a fearful charge of "T N T" into Central Pennsylvania politics, though Cauffiel was not playing partisan politics when he broke things open here Saturday. Political leaders declare the situation is loaded with a lot of explosives whichever way action is taken.

Mayor Cauffiel, who is a multi-millionaire and owns mines in Arizona, may step down. An unconfirmed report had it he might move over into Ohio soon. Youngstown was mentioned as his future home. Cauffiel is also heavily interested in Ohio oil and gas projects. He has had six years' excitement as executive of this city. There has seldom been a dull moment during that time.

Says His Beer "Permit Was Just a Ruse.

By the Associated Press.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 21.—Mayor Joseph Cauffiel, who has taken official cognizance of the allied action of prohibition leaders to initiate impeachment proceedings because the executive told local brewers and saloonkeepers to make and sell "real beer," insists his primary purpose was to attract the attention of prohibition chiefs to the "army of bootleggers selling poison" in this city." He added he had told the beverage dispensers they must "keep within the law."

Mayor Cauffiel's invitation to saloon keepers and brewers to sell "real beer and ale" failed to bring a flood of preprohibition beverages in Johnstown, according to reports of Federal prohibition agents today. E. A. Spragg, agent in charge of this district, thought the brewers and saloon owners were "too wise to run afoul of the Federal laws."

Many saloons and other "soft-drink" establishments reported record sales Saturday, customers in most cases ordering "the real article." The dry sleuths, however, were on the job, and Spragg said he believed the beer produced was within the confines of one-half of 1 per cent.

NEW SHOPMEN'S UNION FORMED ON NEW HAVEN ROAD, PRESIDENT SAYS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.

E. J. PEARSON, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, today announced that, acting under the advices of the Railroad Labor Board, the road's shop craft employes who did not go out on strike and the men who were employed to fill vacancies resulting from the strike have organized a union called the Association of Mechanical Department Employes, New Haven System.

An agreement entered into by the association and the railroad, Pearson said, included, among other things, a provision as to seniority. This is in conformity, he said, with the ruling which the Railroad Labor Board has established.

was traveling at a speed estimated at more than 50 miles an hour in an effort to make up lost time. When the heavy engine struck the rail from which the spikes had been removed, it plowed along on the ties for some distance and then turned completely over. The two enginemen were dead when removed from the wreckage.

The cause of the wreck remained a mystery for some hours because of the confusion at the scene, and because of the fact that the rails and ties had been plowed up and tossed about like matchwood for hundreds of feet by the locomotive. Eight cars loaded with merchandise followed the engine into the ditch, the others remaining on the track.

The train, composed of 23 cars, was said to have been trying to make up several hours lost time as it was due in Chicago at 9:45 Saturday night. The cars were filled with valuable express shipments and carried a crew of eight men, but no passengers. Suddenly on a straight stretch of track about a mile east of Gary, the engine leaped from the track, plowed across the ties, for a hundred feet and then turned turtle, ending in a mass of steaming wreckage at one side of the right of way. The bodies of the engineer and fireman were buried beneath the wreckage.

According to the Gary police, some of the trainmen were quoted as saying that trouble had been experienced with the engine since its departure from Detroit.

NILES, Mich., Aug. 21.—Edward Coy, engineer and Frank Lubbs, fireman, who were killed in the wreck of the New York-Chicago express train near Gary, Ind., yesterday morning, both lived in Niles. Coy, who was nearly 60 years old, had been on the Chicago run for 16 years, and had been an employe of the Michigan Central for 28 years. He is survived by a widow, an invalid, who is prostrated. It is feared she cannot live. Lubbs was married last April. His bride recently left here to visit Lubbs' parents in Iowa.

SAYS RAIL STRIKERS INCLUDE MANY I. W. W.'S

Secretary of Industrial Union Replies to Daugherty's Statements.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Many members of the Industrial Workers of the World are numbered among the railroad strikers, and a number of them "have demonstrated their objection to military despotism by quitting their jobs," according to a statement of Martin Carlson, general secretary of the Railroad Workers' Industrial Union, a part of the I. W. W. organization, according to an announcement by the General Defense Committee today.

Carlson's statement was called forth by recent statements of Attorney-General Daugherty that he believed there was a relation between the railroad strikes and the I. W. W. and that there were indications that the I. W. W.'s are willing to take over some responsibility of train transportation and even the Government itself in the West.

"It is true that there are I. W. W. members among the railroad strikers in various centers who have demonstrated their objection to military despotism by quitting their jobs," Carlson was quoted by the defense committee. "There are I. W. W. members also among the men at work in other railroad departments and they, too, would be out on strike if the majority of the workers in those departments had not been under the domination of their grand lodge officers."

Carlson was quoted as saying also that the I. W. W.'s were "willing and eager" to take over "all responsibility for railroad transportation and for the conduct of all other productive industries." He denied, however, that the organization sought control of the reins of Government.

"We have no interest in directing any of the affairs which are now directed at the White House," Carlson was quoted as saying. "The industries of the country and not the political parties are the nation's life blood. If the great army of productive workers in the basic industries were solidly organized instead of being split apart as they are in the railroad crafts and throughout the American Federation of Labor, they would become the supreme power."

Thrift Means Happiness

Happiness is a movable feast. It moves out the window when the wolf prowls around the door. When there's a continual strain to bring together the well known "both ends" the pursuit of Happiness becomes a losing race.

Thrift is the antidote. It brings back the smile and the song, but it's a two-sided proposition. We encourage it, urge it. It's up to you to practice it, work it.

NO ONE BLAMED FOR COLLISION ON FRISCO AT HORINE

ONE OF CONDUCTORS THE CHIEF WITNESS

J. H. Stump Produces Original Order Governing Movement of Trains at Time of Accident.

A Coroner's jury today returned a verdict of accident, fixing responsibility upon no one, in its investigation of the collision of two Frisco passenger trains at Horine, 35 miles south of St. Louis, last Wednesday.

The inquest was in the case of George Weston, 56 years old, 3824 McDonald avenue, engineer of Train No. 801, who died Friday from injuries in the wreck and whose funeral was held yesterday. E. E. Jones, fireman of Train No. 806, was killed.

Train No. 801, which was southbound, ran into 806 as it was standing at the Horine station. The original order governing the two trains' movements at the hour of the collision was introduced by J. H. Stump, conductor of 801. It read: "No. 806, engine 1109, meet 801, engine 633, at Horine."

Testimony of Conductor.

Stump testified that he gave the order to Weston at Union Station and that Weston signed it and read it back to him. Frank Morgan, train dispatcher at Chaffee, said that he issued the order, sending it to Train No. 801 at Union Station and to Train No. 806 at Crystal City. Morgan declared that, if Engineer Weston had no orders, he should not have proceeded beyond Southwest Junction, at which point the single-track main line begins.

Otto R. Rice of 2610 Oakview avenue, Maplewood, a telegraph operator at Union Station, testified that he received the order over the wire and delivered it in duplicate to the conductor.

The order bore a signature. Myron Weston, fireman of 801 and son of the dead engineer, said he could not be certain that the signature was that of his father. A negro porter, who said he was present when the conductor delivered the order to Weston, said the signature was Weston's.

Other Testimony in Case.

Myron Weston, at a previous inquest which was adjourned to await production of the original train order, declared that because of engine trouble from the moment of departure he did not inquire of his father as to orders, except that his father declared he had a "check" for 806, which indicated that train's arrival in Union Station.

At the inquest today it was testified that the only other order delivered to Weston was a "slow and stop" order, a seldom-varying one given each day upon the train's departure.

Same Witnesses Wanted in Inquest at Festus, Mo.

The Jefferson County inquest into the death of E. E. Jones, fireman of Frisco passenger train 806, in the Horine collision, began today at Festus. After hearing other witnesses, Coroner Elders continued the inquest, to be resumed as soon as Conductor Stump and Fireman Weston of No. 801 could be present. They were at the St. Louis inquest into the death of Engineer Weston of No. 801.

Glenn Young, brakeman of 801, testified that the conductor of 801 had received, and had read to him, an order that 801 should take the siding north of Horine, to meet 806. He said that under the rules, orders were delivered in duplicate to the conductor, who was required to read them to his brakeman, and the engineer, who was required to read them to his fireman. He could not state of his own knowledge that Engineer Weston of 801 had the same orders he received, but he said he could not see how Weston could have taken his engine out of the St. Louis yards without having either received a registry check, showing that 806 had arrived in the yards, or an order as to meeting 806. Young said he was standing on the rear platform, and he said, in reply to a question, that the air brakes might have been applied by him at that point, but he said he was not aware, in time, that the train has passed the switch. He said he did not remember having taken the siding at Horine before, to let 806 pass. No. 806 was three hours late that day.

He said he did not notice any slowing of the train after the air brakes were applied, but that an up-grade caused whatever slowing there was.

Engineer Tells of Orders.

Harry R. Davis, engineer of 806, testified that he had orders to meet 801 north of Horine, and to remain on the main track while 801 should pass on the siding. He said he sent a porter forward to turn the switch for 801. It has been stated that Davis was oiling his engine at the time of the collision, but Davis said he was in the cab, and was not injured, but that Fireman Jones, who apparently tried to step down, was crushed against the tender.

Engineer Davis, after having testified as to the orders, was asked how he thought the engineer of 801 could have disregarded his signals.

"I don't know," he said, "unless it's a bad mental condition, that seems to be everywhere. The day after the wreck a man walked in front of my engine and was killed, and the next day a man drove an auto, with women and children in it, on the track, and it looked as if they would be killed."

Says Fireman Could Take Charge.

He said, in reply to questions, that if an engineer failed to make a stop the fireman could take charge, and that he would think a fireman would do this, rather than to "sit there and let them hit!"

Guy Smith, brakeman of 806, and Scott Gibson, porter of the same train, testified. The former was sent back and the latter ahead, to flag, as is required by the rules. The porter testified that when he saw 801 pass the switch he took out his flag and started to wave it, but that he saw no noticeable slackening of the train's speed.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Child's Hair With

If you want to keep your child's hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

Sport of Kings Revived on Stubble Track in Illinois

The sport of kings, long dormant in Illinois, was revived yesterday on a wheat stubble track on Charley Brandt's farm between Upper Alton and Fosterburg, where countryside nags raced for purses and township honors and incidentally, if unofficial timers are to be believed, broke the world's record for the quarter mile.

Incidentally, the futility of jockey flubdubs was demonstrated by Fred Tetchenal, farmer, who rode bareback in overalls and garnered the glory of the day and the perquisites thereof, vanquishing Abie Fischman, a jockey with a past, who rode with a regulation saddle and sported colors.

In both particulars the pride of Upper Alton was dragged in the dust of a very dusty track and the supremacy of Fosterburg in runners and riders was proven.

Outcome of Rivalry of Owners.

Yesterday's races were the outcome, as real horse races always are, of the rivalry of owners, backed by admiring friends, and the disputed speed of their animals. It has raged for some time, fanned by an occasional inconclusive brush on the road. It centered about the respective running qualities of animals owned by Tetchenal, who farms week days and gallops the highways Sundays, always ready for a test of speed with anything on legs or wheels, and those of L. W. Vogelpohl of Upper Alton, particularly Tetchenal's Fannie D, reserved for riding purposes, and Vogelpohl's Nellie May, whose training has been mostly between the shafts of a tinware wagon.

Obviously, the way to settle it was to have a race. Lacking a race track, Charley Brandt, who has a farm just out of Upper Alton on the Fosterburg road, showed himself a true patron of sports by offering his stubble field. Barring a hump in the middle it was fairly level and experts who looked it over said it would do. The distance was measured with a tape line and the surface was scraped and poles set for the start and finish, and the event was announced for Sunday afternoon.

Large Crowd Attracted.

Townspeople and farmers came from miles around and parked their automobiles across the field parallel to the course and along the road and swarmed upon the track, discussing the merits of the racers and backing their judgment in the good old-fashioned way, supplemental to the purse of $100 which had been put up for each of the races. Race followers of other days who knew the "dope" regaled groups with tales of other historic races and the achievements of world-beaters, and gave, unsolicited, expert opinions on the points of the day's contenders as the animals were warming up.

It had been arranged, to fill out the program, that in addition to the classic between Fannie D. and Nellie May, there would be an opening scamper between Tetchenal's Black Beauty and Vogelpoal's Lucy P., colts of no track training but natural born scamperers.

Tetchenal's spirited mares were favorites, but there were dark whisperings that Abie had "papers," and had been a jockey of parts in the not distant past, and there were misgivings that his skill and trappings might vanquish the farmer boy in overalls and cap rakishly reversed.

When the track, by prodigious effort, had been cleared and the colts were sent off in the first heat by Starter Jim Chessen it looked like there might be something in all the talk about Abie, for his mount came down the field and over the hump as straight as a string, while Tetchenal's little black was bolting for the plowed ground.

Farmer Good Jockey.

But Tetchenal brought her back and got her going in the right direction and she finished under the lash first by half a length, which was the kind of jockeying that counted with the judges, Heck Bassett, Heine Force and Ad Loher.

Abie's stock went up, however, on his showing in the first heat of the big race, which Nellie May won by a length, and which inspired one of his admirers to reveal that Abie was a regular jockey who used to ride for the "Czar of Rooshia."

But Vogelpohl's ponies needed something more than a jockey with a past. The black colt, with the farmer boy up, won the second heat of the youngsters and when it was over Tetchenal was heard to remark that if the course was half a mile he could lose the Vogelpohl bay, jockey and all.

Overalls again triumphed in the second heat of the big race, by a comfortable two lengths, and in the final heat the Vogelpohl nag ran crossway part of the distance and Tetchenal romped by the post an easy winner. A Fosterburg cutup suggested that maybe Nellie May missed the rattle of the tinware.

Sulkey Race Also Given.

Between the heats diversion was provided by three darkies who raced back and forth, ignoring start and finish, in ancient high-wheeled sulkeys, raising a lot of dust and increasing the profits of the soft drink providers on the other side of the plowed ground. The sporting spirit got into two farm girls, too, who raced their mares neck and neck down the road, with organdies flying, and disappeared in a cloud of dust.

When it was all over Tetchenal in his overalls was hailed as the coming jockey whose fame was bound to spread beyond the township. The sports who had backed the Tetchenal mares collected and headed blithely for Fosterburg, while the Upper Altonites went their dejected way, for it is still the rule that for every winner there must be a loser in the sport of kings.

DEATH REPORTED FROM ABROAD

Two East St. Louisans Notified of Brothers' Fatal Illness.

Robert H. Harding of 1645 North Forty-sixth street, East St. Louis, of the real estate firm of Harding Bros., received a cablegram yesterday from Paris, France, announcing the sudden death there of his elder brother, Joseph H. Harding, 65 years old, who was employed as bookkeeper by the real estate firm. Joseph H. Harding was a widower, and had gone to Paris to visit his son, Dr. James Harding. Death resulted from a paralytic stroke. The body will be brought to East St. Louis for burial.

William Yakeleviczus of 332 North Fifth street, East St. Louis, has been notified that his brother, Joseph Yakeleviczus, 37 years old, died of heart disease at Cuxhaven, Germany, on May 26, while en route from East St. Louis to Lithuania, the place of his birth.

AUTO DRIVER HELD ON $10,000 BOND FOR GIRL'S DEATH

Bernice Owens.

Alvin C. Minges, 39 years old, a dentist, 3616 Humphrey st., was held by a Coroner's jury under $10,000 bond on a charge of criminal carelessness following an inquest today over Bernice Owens, 10 years old, who was run down and almost instantly killed at 3:30 yesterday afternoon by Minges' automobile, near Columbia avenue and Hereford street. The child was the daughter of Patrolman Frederick Owens, 5385 Reber place.

The accident occurred on Columbia avenue, about 100 feet west of Hereford street. Witnesses said Minges, accompanied by his wife, was driving his car west on Columbia avenue as a group of children ran out from the south curb of Columbia to board a truck driven by George Ludwig, 4967 Magnolia avenue. The truck had been stopped. Witnesses said Minges swerved his car and ran up on the curbing in an effort to avoid striking the child. She was knocked down and one rear wheel passed over her body.

Testimony varied regarding the rate at which Minges was traveling. Evelyn Heckwolf, 20 years old, 4971 Magnolia avenue, testifed the car was moving at a rapid rate. Another witness contradicted this. Minges declined to make a statement.

Elderly Man Seriously Hurt in Auto Accident.

Seth Wagoner, 72 years old, of 3352 South Broadway, was struck and seriously hurt at 9:40 p. m., when crossing the street in front of 3357 South Seventh street, by the automobile of E. E. Cordori, 8304 Riley avenue. Wagoner suffered lacerations of the head, forearm and body.

25,000 LABOR UNION MEN PLAN TO BE IN LABOR DAY PARADE

March Will Start at 9 A. M. and Will Be Followed by Picnic at Triangle Park.

Twenty-five thousand members of St. Louis labor unions will participate in the annual Labor Day parade, David Kreyling, grand marshal, said today.

The parade will form at 9 a. m. at Twelfth boulevard and Chestnut street. The marchers will be reviewed at Jefferson avenue and Washington boulevard and will disband at Leffingwell and Washington. Transportation will be provided from that point to Triangle Park, 4100 South Broadway, where the annual picnic will be held. The parade will be in five divisions, each under a division marshal. Kreyling has appointed Matthew True, representing the United Railways employes; Robert Tomsen, of the Moving Picture Operators' Union, and Michael Kurrus, of the Stage Employes' Union, as his aids.

The Building Trades Council will be represented by several locals, Kreyling said.

GIRL, 15, KILLED IN FALL OF 40 FEET FROM CLIFF

Many Picknickers See Helen Klawonn of East St. Louis Fatally Hurt at Falling Springs.

Within sight of several scores of picnickers, Helen Klawonn, 15 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Klawonn of 1012 Market avenue, East St. Louis, lost her footing when on a narrow ledge of a steep path up the face of a cliff at Falling Springs, near Cahokia, Ill., at 1:30 p. m. yesterday, and fell 40 feet to the rocks below. She struck upon her head. Her skull was fractured and she died before an ambulance reached St. Mary's Hospital.

Mildred Egan, 15, of 918 Trendley avenue, East St. Louis, one of three girls with whom Helen had gone on a picnic, said the girls were ascending the 60-foot cliff and had passed the most dangerous point, where the falling spring gushes from the rocks and makes the path slippery with spray. Ten feet above is a narrow ledge, almost horizontal, and the girls were walking along it in single file when Helen, second in line, pitched straight downward without any outcry. Whether she slipped on loose gravel upon the path or became suddenly dizzy, Mildred could not say.

The path is considered a dangerout one, and many persons ascend it at the point near the spring on their hands and knees. Helen and Mildred had never been up it before. A safer route leads at another place to the top of the cliff.

Falling Springs, six miles south of East St. Louis, is a popular spot for picnics, and the girls had just finished their lunch when they decided to go to the cliff top for a view of St. Louis and of the American bottoms on the Illinois side. The accident brought an end to all picnics for the day. An inquest was held today.

POLICEMAN KNOCKED DOWN BY GIRL OF THIRTEEN

Daughter Is Said to Have Aided Father Resisting Arrest on Traffic Charge.

During a melee which followed the arrest of Louis C. Seher, 43 years old, at 12:45 this morning on a traffic violation charge in front of his home, 2908 North Vandeventer avenue, Patrolman Louis Orphen of the Dayton Street District was knocked down with his own nightstick, which had been wrested from his hands by Seher's 13-year-old daughter, Charlotte. Orphen emerged victor after losing his nightstick, cap, police badge and keys, and locked Seher in a cell at the Dayton Street Station.

Patrolman Orphen reported he noticed the automobile, running without lights, stop in front of the Vandeventer avenue address and accosted Seher. An altercation followed and Seher was arrested. Seher pinned the patrolman's arms to his sides and Charlotte seized Orphen's stick and dropped him with a blow on the head, Orphen reported. She handed the club to Seher, who struck Orphen on the shoulder as he regained his feet, the policeman said.

The fight ended when Orphen fired three shots in the air and struck Seher on the head with his revolver. Seher was taken to a hospital and treated for scalp wounds and then placed in a cell under charges of operating a car without lights, resisting arrest and disturbing the peace. Orphen recovered all his equipment except his keys, which could not be found.

MULE PROVIDES EXCITEMENT FOR KANSAS CITY CROWD

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 21.—It took a mule driver, five city firemen, a veterinarian, a hardware man, a blacksmith and about 1000 spectators two hours and five minutes to release a diminutive mule which caught its hoof in a street drain pipe here yesterday.

The job began when the mule put its right hoof into the drain pipe while being watered at a city trough. The driver, after frantic effort, called for help. Five firemen worked industriously 30 minutes, when the veterinarian happened by. His assistance was enlisted. Meantime, the crowd grew larger, and there was no lack of advice. Finally the hardware man was called upon to furnish tools to break the concrete ring of the pipe. A piece of the pipe broke in a ring and the concrete rested on the mule's hoof. That gave the blacksmith his cue and he pulled the shoe from the hoof. Amid a chorus of "Ohs" and "Ahs" from the crowd the relief corps pulled the hoof from the pipe. The blacksmith shod the mule, the mule bit the veterinarian, the veterinarian swore, the crowd laughed and everybody went home.

INDICATIONS THAT BONUS BILL WILL PASS THIS WEEK

increased until 1926, when the estimated expense will be $370,000,000. Besides this, the Government faces a deficit in the coming year of nearly $400,000,000. The soldier element feels that economies can be best made in other directions, however, and that the soldier should get his compensation which the American Legion spokesmen say has been too long delayed anyhow.

Republicans Will Suffer Most.

The Republicans will suffer most from their act. They will no doubt earn the gratitude of the soldiers, but when election time rolls around every two years the fact that taxes are high will be an increasing cause of discontent. The Democrats, on the other hand, have been afraid the Republicans might dodge the issue of adjusted compensation for the war veterans and leave the problem to be handled by a Democratic Congress. That's why the Democrats have been so active in Senate and House in forcing the measure through.

The soldier bonus bill could not override a presidential veto without substantial aid from Democrats. But since the Democrats are not in power they will not be hurt by such dissatisfaction as may arise over the high cost of Government or the failure of the Republicans to reduce taxes. The Democrats will profit politically by what the Republicans are doing. Many Republicans concede this, but see no way of curing the situation for the immediate danger which confronts them is the soldier vote which they feel should not be antagonized within a few weeks of congressional election. They prefer to take their chances on other forms of discontent later on and meet each political problem when it becomes acute.

MISSING GIRL FOUND MARRIED

Stella Churchill, 17 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Churchill of 915 Walton avenue, reported as missing from her home last Friday, was found by Policeman Rennekamp in a Chinese restaurant at Delmar boulevard and Taylor avenue, at 1 a. m. today. Thomas Sweeney, 29 years old, of 4031 Nebraska avenue, was with the girl at the time. They produced a marriage license, showing they had eloped to Clayton Saturday and were married, the girl representing herself as 21 years of age. She was placed in the House of Detention and Sweeney was held.

FUNDS SOUGHT FOR USE IN HERRIN INQUIRY

Illinois Chamber of Commerce Starts Campaign for Mine Massacre Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Aug. 21.—The Illinois Chamber of Commerce has designated the week beginning today as "Herrin week," for a campaign for funds to aid Attorney-General Edward J. Brundage in the detection and prosecution of the persons guilty in connection with the massacre of nonunion miners at Herrin, Ill., last June.

Business and civic organizations have been invited to join the Chamber of Commerce campaign, and it is planned to carry the drive into every community of Illinois. Pastors have been asked to appeal to their congregations to aid the fund, "to prove to the world that the good citizens of Illinois are united in a determination to uphold law and order," John H. Camlin of Rockford, president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, declared today.

Camlin announced the following general State committee in charge of the campaign: George Woodruff, Chicago, chairman; Wayne Hummer, La Salle, and Gerald B. Frank, Peoria.

Grand Jurors for Herrin Investigation Being Notified.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Aug. 21.—With the convening of the special grand jury called to investigate the killings at Herrin a week off, sentiment in Williamson County is crystallizing in favor of a fair and impartial investigation, say county officials. The fining of Tom Carver, a union officer, by Judge Slater has furthered the demand for a thorough inquiry. Carver was found guilty of carrying concealed weapons and of having fired at a nonunion worker, a negro, in an attempt to intimidate him.

State's Attorney Delos Duty says he believes indictments will be returned for many who took part in the riots. Special deputies are notifying the grand jurors of their selection, but the names of the deputies and of the jurors are being withheld until the jury is completed.

175 Marines Off to Exposition.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 21.—A selected contingent of 175 United States marines, nearly every one a veteran of the World War, are en route to Brazil aboard the battleship Nevada, to attend the centennial exposition at Rio de Janeiro.

HENRY HEIL JR. GIVEN 90-DAY TERM; PAROLED

Pleads Guilty to Alleging His Automobile Was Stolen to Collect Insurance.

Henry Heil, Jr., 28 years old, of 3606 Connecticut street, secretary of the Heil Chemical Co., 210-14 South Fourth street, was sentenced to 90 days in the workhouse today by Judge Hochdoerfer, in the Court of Criminal Correction, on a plea of guilty to a charge of conspiring to defraud an insurance company by alleging his automobile had been stolen so he could collect $2540 theft insurance.

Immediately after sentence was passed, Heil was paroled on the recommendation of Miss Lena Frahk, Associate Prosecuting Attorney, who stated that the parole had been requested by the insurance company and for the reasons that this was his first offense and that he had a wife and two children to support.

Under the parole, Heil will have to report his conduct regularly at periods for two years.

Two other men, Robert G. Howie, 37, of Detroit, a showman, and Thomas Sterling, 39, of 1424A Olive street, an actor, who were jointly indicted with Heil, were used as witnesses against Heil, and the cases against them were dismissed after Heil's conviction.

Early last June Heil allowed Howie and Sterling to drive his automobile to Springfield, Ill., where they sold it for $100. Heil said he had been induced, while under the influence of liquor, to agree to the scheme.

KILLED IN DIVE INTO POOL

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 21.—James E. Willits, 31 years old, a former captain in the Rainbow Division, was killed about 12:30 yesterday morning when he dived from a nine-foot diving platform into nine feet of water in the Kansas City Athletic Club's swimming pool.

Willits weighed about 225 pounds. His head struck the concrete bottom of the natatorium.

Willits was a guest at a dinner at the home of Lee Marshall. The Marshalls and their guests went to the club to dance. Following the dance, several of the men went swimming.

Willits was born June 23, 1891, at Quincy, Ill. He was a graduate of Amherst College.

Harding's Feet Are Almost Perfect

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—(Universal Service.)—Dr. Peter Kahler, grandson of the orthopedist of the same name who made President Lincoln's boots, after measuring President Harding's feet today pronounced this verdict on them:

"Muscularly and anatomically almost perfect in structure and condition, and almost identical in size and shape; a most rare condition and an indication of a splendid heritage, great vitality and most excellent care and well-being."

The book in which Dr. Kahler entered his measurements and drew diagrams for President Harding's shoes was the same in which the elder Kahler entered Lincoln's measurements. Both charts are autographed by the presidents.

SPECULATION RIFE IN NORTHCLIFFE WILL

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—There is nation-wide speculation as to the contents of Lord Northcliffe's will, but so far public curiosity has not been gratified by even the slightest indication of its import. Although some Fleet street estimates place his fortune between $5,000,000 and $8,000,000, there are rumors that it far exceeds those figures. In some quarters there are reports that the great editor and newspaper proprietor was worth approximately $19,000,000 when he died.

Lord Riddell's Sunday paper, "News of the World," says:

"It is rumored his estate will amount to some four million pounds. This will involve the payment of heavy death duties to the amount, probably, of somewhere in the neighborhood of £1,750,000. To meet the demands of the revenue authorities, there is no doubt some part of these great properties will have to be realized. No details of Lord Northcliffe's will have yet been published, and it is understood that when he died even the members of his family did not know its contents."

Contrary to information from other quarters, Lord Riddell's paper says that not only did Northcliffe shortly before being stricken obtain substantially the whole Walters family interest in the Times, but also Sir John Ellerman's interest. While it is generally believed in the newspaper world here that Northcliffe did institute negotiations for the whole Walters interest, it is believed there are some clauses which make it possible for the Walters family to buy back at market price shares acquired by Northcliffe in the event of his giving up the Times or in event of his death.

QUESTION AS TO WHETHER LAW GIVES REED CONVENTION SEAT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 21.—Some question has been raised whether Senator James A. Reed will be entitled by law to a seat in the Democratic State Convention, at Excelsior Springs, Sept. 12. His friends expressed the hope he would be present on the convention floor to lead the fight to incorporate his ideas into the platform on which Senator Reed and the State candidates will run in the November election. The law admits to membership in the convention State committeemen, candidates for State offices, candidates for the State Legislature, and candidates for the Congress. J. G. L. Harvey, Reed's law partner, said today he had not investigated the question thoroughly, but expressed the opinion that a fair interpretation of the law would admit Senator Reed under the general term of Congressman.

Senator Reed will attend the convention, according to his present plans. Harvey said he knew of no one preparing a draft of a platform. The big question before the State Convention is whether the platform will indorse the national and State platforms of 1920 and specifically approve Wilson's foreign policies.

CONCERN FELT FOR FLYERS

By the Associated Press.

CALCUTTA, India, Aug. 21.—No news has been received from Capt. Norman McMillman and Capt. Mailins, who left here yesterday for Akyab, Burma, in continuation of the round-the-world flight, which Maj. W. T. Blake was obliged to abandon on account of illness.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—A Calcutta message to The Times says considerable anxiety is felt for the aviators, Captains Norman McMillman and Champaign Mailins, who are 30 hours overdue at Akyab, Burma, for which they left early yesterday, continuing the attempt to fly around the world. The flight should have been made in about five hours. Eleven vessels along the route reported they have not seen the plane.

THREE MEMBERS OF ONE FAMILY WIN AT CHAUTAUQUA ROQUE

E. J. Byron, Daughter and Son Take Honors in Annual Championship Games.

Three members of one family were winners Saturday in the annual roque (croquet) championships at Pigsa Chautauqua. E. J. Byron of Alton won the men's championship, his daughter, Gladys, 12 years old, won the girls' championship, and his son, Ralph, 10 years old, won the boys' championship. Mrs. J. H. Dickey of Decatur, Ill., won the women's championship.

The players in the men's contest, in which interest was keenest, were Byron, Dr. C. J. Clapsaddle of Chautauqua; E. Witte of St. Louis, Eugene Gaskins and E. J. Christo of Alton, who had qualified by winning the elimination games. All except Byron and Dr. Clapsaddle were eliminated in the forenoon's play. Byron and Clapsaddle fought it out in the afternoon with Dr. S. K. Dillman of East St. Louis, last year's champion, and E. E. Rudolph of St. Louis as referees. Each man played two balls. Byron won by a close margin.

In the women's contests, in which only one ball was played, Mrs. Dickey defeated Mrs. John Murck of St. Louis, Mrs. August Beiser of Alton and Mrs. A. C. McCurdy of Webster Groves.

The prizes were handsomely ornamented mallets.

Next Saturday there will be contests between the champions of the past six years.

"TREAT, NOT PUNISH, FOR SIN"

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—There should be no such word in the dictionary as "sin" to describe conduct, Thomas Dawes Eliot, associate professor of sociology at Northwestern University, declared in a talk yesterday. "Sin" should be properly termed "psychoneurosis," and the sinner "treated," rather than punished, he asserted.

"We also make many other harsh mistakes in language," he continued. "Take the word 'vice' that is habit disease, the fool is an 'eccentric' and the half wit is a 'moron.' Such brutal words as we are won to use in describing the unfortunate are based on outlived ideas and concepts. They bar the new grasp of realities."

Fine for Skin Exposed to Sun or Flying Dirt

These days the face needs special care and attention. Flying dust and dirt, the beating sun, are severe on any skin. Their despoiling effects are best overcome by the application of pure mercolised wax. This keeps skin and pores in a cleanly condition, the complexion beautifully white and spotless. Reddened, tanned, freckled or roughened cuticle is actually absorbed by it. One ounce of mercolised wax, obtainable at any drug store, is sufficient to completely renovate a soiled complexion. It is used like cold cream, allowed to remain on over night, and washed off in the morning.

Pore lines and even the deeper wrinkles often appear at this season. In such cases nothing is better than a fine bath made by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This is remarkably effective.

With the Yankees idle the Browns have a chance to advance within a half game of first place by winning today.

FIRST INNING.

BROWNS—Tobin beat out a swinging bunt. Foster rolled to Young, who tagged Tobin and tossed to Hauser for a double play. Sisler beat out a roller to Young. Sisler died stealing, Perkins to Galloway. NO RUNS.

PHILADELPHIA—Young walked. Hauser doubled to right, Young stopping at third. Welch hit into the left field bleachers for a home run, scoring Young and Hauser ahead of him. Miller singled to left and Davis was removed from the box. Kolp succeeded him. Perkins bounced a long drive over the left field fence for a home run, scoring behind Miller. Galloway fouled to Sisler. Walker doubled to right center. McManus tossed out Dykes. Heimach out, Sisler to Kolp. FIVE RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

BROWNS—Jacobson out, Young to Hauser. McManus was called out on strikes. Williams beat out a hit to second. Severeid walked. On the double steal, Williams went to third and Severeid to second. Gerber fouled to Perkins. NO RUNS.

PHILADELPHIA—Young walked. Hauser flied to Jacobson. Welch hit into a double play, Foster to McManus to Sisler. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

FOURTH INNING.

BROWNS—McManus walked. Williams forced McManus, Hauser to Galloway. Severeid lined to Welch and Williams was doubled trying to reach second. Welch to Hauser to Heimach to Galloway. NO RUNS.

PHILADELPHIA—Walker fanned. Dykes singled to center. Heimach walked. Young singled to center, scoring Dykes. Heimach went to third and Young to second on Gerber's wild throw to the plate. Hauser flied to Williams. Welch popped to Gerber. ONE RUN.

Cardinals Idle Until Wednesday

Open Dates Today and Tuesday Gives Team Rest Before Braves, Giants, Call.

There will be no game today. The Cardinals do not play again until Wednesday, when they oppose the Boston Braves. Friday the Giants will be here for three games. If the Cardinals do worse than two out of three they are going to be in a bad way.

The Cardinals played rather listlessly yesterday. Whenever Jacques Fournier is out of the lineup there is little spark and ginger in the Cardinal machine. Fournier was coming along nicely after a bad start when he was benched for Bottomly. He had made 15 hits in 42 times at bat, which is over .300. A bad leg got Jacques off to a bad start early in the season, but he is apparently out of the slump stage now. He batted for Barfoot yesterday and was passed.

George Toporcer was hit on the foot with a thrown ball Saturday and was unable to get into uniform yesterday. He may be out several days.

Fred Toney has not yet advised the Cardinal club of the date when he will report.

George Smith, who pitched for the Phils yesterday, has had a colorful major league career. He graduated from Columbia University, New York, about six years ago and was immediately signed by the Giants. He went from bad to worse and from worse to Cincinnati and finally to Philadelphia. Never considered a reliable pitcher he has not been threatened at any time with a session in the minors. He has been just good enough to stay in the major leagues.

Douglas Will Not Get a Rehearing

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—"Shufflin' Phil" Douglas, former Giant pitcher, forever barred from organized baseball by Judge Landis, will not secure a rehearing of his case, it was stated from Judge Landis' office today.

"The guilty party has been found and punished and so far as our office is concerned the matter is a closed incident," it was stated.

Starred for U. S. in Olympic Meet

MISS CAMELIA SABIE.
Who won two firsts and a third in yesterday's games at Paris, France. Miss Sabie is a student at the New Jersey State Normal.

Wray's Column

Riding Herd on a Baseball Club.

PROBABLY there have been fewer regular members of the ancient order of grandstand baseball critics who at one time or another have not declaimed: "I wish I was manager of that club for a week. I'd make a winner out of it."

The intimation being that the poor boob who was being paid $15,000 annually to ride herd on the bunch of locos in his charge was so totally inadequate to perform the duties of his office.

But desist, Mr. Grandstander. Perhaps ye wit not what ye say. Certainly if you express such a thought in good faith, it is you, and not the paid, manager, who needs the early attention of an alienist.

All the manager of a baseball club has to be—always excepting those with unlimited bank accounts—is the following:

1. A perfect judge of baseball talent.
2. A superlative judge of human nature.
3. An infallible master of baseball stratagem.
4. A magician able to convert second-rate into airtight pitching.
5. One who can suspend and fine his players and have them thank him for doing it.
6. One who can make a rabbit bite a bull terrier, or the lion and the lamb lie down together.
7. Able to whip any man on his club and not afraid to try.
8. Patience personified.
9. Without a nervous system.

Even if a manager were all of this, he could not come through without some critics calling for his head. Because in baseball part of the pay-as-you-enter price includes the privilege of turning thumbs down on all the gladiators and other personages on the field.

One Case in Point.

TAKE the case of Branch Rickey of the Cardinals. He jockeyed a feeble bunch of pitchers and a poor defensive team into first place for a time. It was quite a performance, but even then the grandstand could not see him. Now that the team has a recent record for the past several weeks of 14 defeates and 9 victories, the anvil chorus is at it again.

Under such conditions Rickey does nothing right, some fans hold. The echoes of it reach the baseball club and it affects the morale of the players. They grow restless and murmur against the management's policies. Factions develop in the team for and against the leader. Disgusted players say "how-dye-do" to hard-hit balls and try half-heartedly. Pitchers throw down the ball and walk from the box disgustedly when errors occur behind them.

Recriminations and even fist fights in the club house occur.

The air is charged with pent-up electricity ready to spark into an explosion. For the pennant is drifting from view and with it the $5000-per-player world's series portion. You can't blame the ball player much for losing his poise.

It's Up to the Leader.

BUT through all such crisis the manager has to keep his temper, his mental poise and do the right thing, knowing that every move he makes or every change he orders will be criticised by half of the club and by more than that portion of the public. If he guesses wrong, he can hear them calling, calling loudly: "Get a manager!"

In the meantime he has to overhaul his machine and start it running on all cylinders again.

In the midst of it all, he has to keep his men from "going bad" through disgust. On the road he has to sit up in the hotel corridor and count 'em as they come in.

Inevitably the strain gets three or four of the squad. They roll in defiantly, past the hour. The manager curtly says: "You're fined $100, Smith."

And Smith, or Jones, or Brown may leer around belligerently, especially if he happens to be important, and say: "I dare you to collect it."

Yes, sir, insubordination! If the manager passes it up, the player has his "goat" and the rest of the club hears of it. If he carries out the fine, he does it with the thought that the player may "lay down" on him in games.

He digs in the spurs and rides rough-shod over the player—the fine goes. If the player is a man, and most of them are, he will acknowledge the error to himself next day and forget it. But there is always a percentage of bad actors in every group and it is these who cause the manager gray hairs.

Pity Poor Miller Huggins.

MILLER HUGGINS can probably tell more about the trials of a manager than any other living person, unless it be John J. McGraw. McGraw, a rough-rider himself, has always felt that he could control eccentricity, bad habits and even loose morals. He has not been afraid to hire wonderful players with tainted reputations and he has, in the main, been able to get away with it. He carries a mailed fist and although he has won but a few of his many baseball fights, his belligerency has always dominated his hirelings.

Huggins has not been able to take up cudgels physically with his team as McGraw, Chance and a few other "peerless leaders" who ruled by sheer force. With the most eccentric bunch of prima donnas ever assembled, he has to rule by reason, by fines or by appeals to the owners. Several times reports have spread that his club was out of hand; but each year Miller bobs up in the saddle, digging his spurs into his red-eyed bronchos, and riding them to the front or near it.

Men who handle temperamental players, who are contending for the pennant, are the real miracle men of baseball, whether they win or lose.

But up there in the grand stand, who cares what happens behind the scenes means nothing, if it is offered as an alibi for failure.

Ferris Club Net Results.

Three more matches were played yesterday in the tournament being held by the newly organized Ferris Tennis Club in University City. Two contests in singles were played, while one doubles match was decided.

The Ferris club is holding tournaments for men in singles and doubles, for women in singles and doubles and mixed doubles. More than 30 players are entered in the five events.

Summary: Men's singles—Wheaton Ferris defeated Clarence Hughes, 6—0, 6—0; Oscar Brockmeyer defeated Walter Hoevel, 6—3, 6—2.

Men's doubles—Ferris and Blaine defeated Hoevel and Granville, 8—6, 6—4.

Foreign Teams in U.S. Doubles Have No Chance--Tilden

Patterson and Wood, of Australasia, May Possibly Break Into Semifinals.

By William T. Tilden, II.
Tennis Champion of the World, 1920-21.
(Copyright, 1922.)

The man of the hour is usually the man of the moment. By this cryptic comment I mean to emphasize the value of perfect condition in the pinch to all athletes. Unless a man is at his best in the big moment he is considered a total loss and sinks into ignominious oblivion no matter how great his previous record throughout the season, or years, may be. Morvich has lost ground in public fancy.

The big moment of the tennis season is at hand. The national singles championship looms in the near distance. The players of America, aye, even of the world, are priming themselves for the test. It is interesting to note the various methods used by these men to reach the pink of condition on the day of the opening of the national singles.

Visitors Need Practice.

The foreign stars naturally must gain as much experience on American courts and become as accustomed to American climate and playing conditions as possible, for which reason the Australian, French and Spanish players wisely play in as many events as possible. The Davis Cup teams themselves force a certain amount of play, but the visiting stars also compete in the doubles championship and some singles events.

Last year Bill Johnston felt that he made the mistake of playing too much. He played the challenge round at Longwood, followed this with Seabright and Newport, the national doubles and Davis Cup. He was overtennised at Philadelphia in the singles. This year Johnston will play at Crescent, Seabright and the national doubles. The Davis Cup should find him just reaching the crest of his great game and the national singles will be the climactic effort of his tennis season. Most of the players, particularly Washburn, Davis, the Kinsey brothers, Voshell, Shimidzu and Hunter, require all the tennis they can get. They will play right up to the week of the national singles and plunge into the struggle still keen in the flush of continuous competition.

Overplay to Be Avoided.

Dick Williams and Vincent Richards are two men who do not require continuous play. Both of these great players overtrained last year and came to the nationals drawn and wearied. Unless one or both of these men are called on to defend the Davis Cup, they will come to the nationals keen, if somewhat underplayed. Williams will train with the Nassau, Longwood, Seabright and the national doubles events. Richards played at New York, Hartford, Providence and Crescent in the early summer, and at Seabright and the national doubles—not a hard schedule in the early year for men who have a good rest in August.

Personally, I like a lot of tennis in the early season. I played eight successive weeks and ended them in good shape. I realized that a rest was necessary and for that reason did not play Seabright, Southampton or Newport. My preparation for the nationals will be the national doubles and Davis Cup. I hope to come to singles in a keen and vigorous condition. Staleness is mental far more than physical, and the only serious danger of too much play is thinking and living, rather than playing, too much tennis.

No Set Rules Can Be Given.

Every man should train according to his temperament. What is one man's meat is another man's poison, so I seldom if ever advise players of mature years how to train. My method would not suit them at all, while I would not stand a match under their system. Live normally and naturally, use common sense rather than book rules in training, and you obtain the best results.

Tigers Beat New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 21.—Erratic fielding helped the Detroit Americans to a 7-to-3 victory over the New Haven (Eastern League) team here yesterday. The score: Detroit 7-13-1, New Haven 3-8-5. Batteries—Cole and Manion; Stryker, Woodward and Hargraves.

Cardinals Regain Batting Form, Overcome an Early Lead and Defeat Phils, 9-6

With the Score 6 to 1 Against Them in Sixth, the Rickeymen Jump on George Smith, Singleton and Weinert and Tally 8 Runs in 2 Innings.

By Joseph F. Holland,

Pitchers' reputations hang on slender threads. A moment's mastery over one great hitter will often lead a manager to repose $1000 worth of confidence in 10 cents worth of ability. Evidently some such admiration existed yesterday in the mind of Irving Wilhelm, leader of the Phillies, when he chose George Smith, scholar and nomad of the National League, to oppose the Cardinals in the final game of the series.

George has never been effective against the Cardinals. However, on Saturday, he had acted as a relief pitcher and with the bases packed and groaning, had fanned Rogers Hornsby, whom one might call a prominent Cardinal clubman. That little skit saved the ball game for the Phillies; not that it meant anything particularly, but Smith had fanned Hornsby, saved the ball game and Wilhelm decided that he would come back yesterday.

George came back with his awkward pitching motion and a fair curve ball. For five innings he trudged out to the mound and back to the bench with one Cardinal run representing the extent of his weakness.

Looked Like a Good Selection.

Meantime strange things were transpiring while the Phillies were at bat and at the end of the fifth Wilhelm and Smith led by the huge score of 6 to 1. Wilhelm congratulated himself, admitted that his hunch in pitching Smith was correct and prepared to grease up the skids which would convey the Cardinals down into a tie for second place with the Chicago Cubs.

But there the figuring and contemplating stopped. George Smith, nomad and everything, was knocked clear out of the box in the sixth inning when four straight hits scored three Cardinal runs. John Singleton replaced him and after walking one man in the seventh, was benched for Weinert. Weinert was another pitcher whose relief work Saturday had been of an exceptional quality. He pitched one inning and fanned two batters while the third tapped to the infield.

Weinert Gets His.

However, there was none of that yesterday. Four Cardinal batters pounded out decisive hits that scored five runs off Weinert in the seventh. It lifted the game clear out of the mediocre stage and placed it along with many others gained by the devastating Cardinal punch. That punch, losing 6 to 1 at the opening of the sixth inning, had completely wiped out the deficit with eight runs in two innings. And there you have the final score of the engagement, 9 to 6.

That seventh inning is worth detailing. Blades opened it with a pass and Singleton was immediately yanked. He was awful mad about it and fired the ball at his captain, Artie Fletcher, who took him out. Weinert replaced him and Blades hiked to third on Hornsby's hit to left for a base. Hornsby took second while the Phillies were trying to find Blades in a swirl of dust at third. Then Weinert made it even easier for the Cardinals. He made a wild, wild pitch and Blades scored while Hornsby took third. Jim Bottomly, the new first baseman, walked.

Les Mann, who never answers a fellow's letters, entered the game at this point to bat for Heine Mueller. Les whaled one to the right center-field fence and Hornsby scored the tying run while Bottomly stopped at third. They were held there while Stock and Ainsmith expired on infield plays, but Johnny Lavan shattered the tie with a single through Wrightstone that scored the two runners. Johnny waltzed to second on the play at home and scored on Pfeffer's single to right.

Alone in Second Place.

The victory enabled the Cardinals to keep pace with the Giants and gave them a clear title to second place, inasmuch as the New York victory over the Cubs dropped Chicago back one full game. The Giants have a three and one-half game lead.

The Cardinals won as many ball games yesterday as they did all last week. That's a record. Within the knowledge of the oldest baseball fan, the Giants have never been able to touch this performance.

It looked for a time yesterday like another rout. Bill Pertica of the "Sensations of 1921," was a positive bore for two innings and gave the Phils five runs before Shotton removed him for Clyde Barfoot. Barfoot and Pfeffer did good work the remainder of the game, although Clyde had to work to keep the hits off him scattered.

CINCINNATI AND TORONTO PRINTERS ARE DEFEATED

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 21.—The twelfth annual tournament of the Union Printers' International Baseball League opened here yesterday, the Cincinnati and Toronto teams being eliminated in the first round of play. St. Paul defeated Cincinnati, 5 to 4, and Cleveland won from Toronto, 9 to 8.

The St. Louis Typos will play their first game today, meeting the Chicago nine, which is favored to win the 1922 championship.

Pittsburg eliminated Detroit this morning.

Favorites Win in First Round of Park Net Event

By Davison Obear.

All first round matches in the men's singles event of the Municipal elimination tennis tournament have been played. There were no upsets in this round but a number of close contests took place between the players representing the various park clubs.

Six matches in the men's singles were played yesterday while the balance of first round contests took place on Saturday. Several doubles encounters were completed yesterday afternoon. In the feature contest Robert Mortland and George Lauth of the Reservoir Park Tennis Club defeated the Fairground representatives, T. Minnegerode and H. Echterhoff. The match required the limit of three sets, Mortland and Lauth winning by a 4—6, 6—2, 7—5 score.

Kammann Defeats Kratz.

Karl Kammann of Forest Park won his first round match from Al Kratz, O'Fallon Park player and local interscholastic champion. Charles Powers, the Okland Tennis Club champion, started well against Leo Moult of Tower Grove, forcing the first set to deuce. Moult improved in the second set, which he won with the loss of only two games. The score was 7—5, 6—2.

W. A. Crooks of the Manchester Park Club and Louis Bernero, the Sherman Park player, had a long tussle in the men's singles event. The contest was not decided until 26 games had been played. Bernero won the first set at 6—4, but after a hard fight dropped the second to Crooks by a 11-9 score. The Manchester Park star won the last set, 6—4.

Referee Alvin Schwarz announced today that all first round matches in the doubles event must be played by next Saturday night. Second round singles contests must also be completed by that time. The third round matches in the men's singles will be played next Sunday. Pairings for the women's singles and doubles in the municipal tournament will be made this week.

England First, U. S. Second in First Olympic Meet for Women

Weakness in Sprints Causes Failure of American Girls to Outscore Rivals—Miss Camelia Sabie, With 12 Points, Leads U. S. Team.

PARIS, France, Aug. 21.—The first women's Olympic athletic games held since recorded history began was completed here yesterday, in Pershing Stadium, when 67 athletes, representing five nations, struggled through an entire day of preliminary and final heats. At the close the team of 16 girls that represented England had won, with a total of 50 points. Nineteen points in the rear trailed the United States representatives, with a total of 31, followed by France, 29; Czecho-Slovakia, 12, and Switzerland, 6.

The American team was handicapped by the absence of Miss Rathbone of the Canal Zone, one of the team's best sprinters, who turned an ankle in practice abroad and was unable to compete. Miss Floreida Batson, the American team's captain, was also below her best form, owing to an injury suffered immediately after her arrival in France. On the whole, however, the Americans were well satisfied with their showing, as England had the largest entry list of any nation except France, which had over 30 athletes available.

Miss Camelia Sabie was the leading point winner for America, she scoring firsts in the 100-yard hurdles and in the standing broad jump, besides taking a third in the running broad jump.

The U. S. weakness in the sprints caused the team's downfall, Miss Godbold's fourth in the 300-meter was being the only point scored in three dash events. Miss Lines of England led in individual points with 15, three more than Miss Sabie earned.

New Records Established.

The performances resulted in the breaking of several records. Miss Godbold set a world's mark in the 8-pound shot putting alternately with both arms of 20 meters and 22 centimeters, and Miss Sabie doing the 100-yard hurdles in the record time of 14 2-5 seconds.

Other records established during the meet were by Mlle. Mejslikova, Czecho-Slovakia, in the 60-yard dash of 7 3-5 seconds, and by the same girl in the second elimination trial heat for the 100-yard dash of 11 2-5 seconds, although the final in this event was won in 12 seconds flat, the 1000-meter run in 3 minutes 12 seconds by Mlle. Breard, France, and the 440-yard relay in 51 4-5 seconds, made by the British team.

The American relay, which finished second, was declared distanced by the officials and placed fourth "because the Czecho-Slovakian relay team interfered with the French team at the third relay, while the French team was running in second place.

Dr. Harry E. Stewart, New Haven, coach of the American team, has filed an official protest. The ruling of the judges made a difference of 5 points in the summing up, but did not affect the final results of the games.

The 300 meters event was practically a walkover for England, while the French team was supreme in the 1000 meters race. Miss Lines of England was the best individual point winner, with 15 points. Camela Sabie, with 12, and Lucille Godbold with nine, were the best performers for the American team. Perfect weather brought out a crowd of more than 20,000.

60-METER DASH—Won by Mlle. B. Mejslikova, Czecho-Slovakia; Miss Lines, England, second; Miss Callebout, England, third; Mlle. Maugars, France, fourth. Time, 7.35s. (world record).

100-YARD DASH—Won by Miss Callebout, England; Mlle. B. Mejslikova, Czecho-Slovakia, second; Miss Lines, England, third; Mlle. Prost, France, fourth. Time, 12s.

300-METER DASH—Won by Miss Lines, England; Miss Cast, England, second; Mlle. A. Darreau, France, third; Miss Mucill Godbold, United States, fourth. Time, 44 4-5s.

100-YARD HURDLES—Won by Miss Camelia Sabie, United States; Miss Carrie Hatt, England, second; Mlle. Therese Laloz, France, third; Miss Flora Batson, United States, fourth. Time, 14 2-5s.

1000-METER RUN—Won by Mlle. Breard, France; Mlle. Lenoir, France, second; Miss Hall, England, third; Miss Godbold, United States, fourth. Time, 3m. 12s. (world record).

440-YARD RELAY—Won by England; France, second; Czecho-Slovakia, third; United States, fourth. Time, 51 4-5s.

STANDING BROAD JUMP—Won by Miss Carmelia Sabie, United States; Miss Hughes, England, second; Mlle. Conte, France, third; Miss Birchenough, England, fourth. Distance, 2m. 4.85c.

RUNNING BROAD JUMP—Won by Miss Lines, England; Miss Elizabeth Stine, United States, second; Miss Camelia Sabie, United States third; Miss Carrie Hatt, England, fourth. Distance, 5.06m.

RUNNING HIGH JUMP—Miss Nancie Voorhees, United States; Miss Carrie Hatt, England, tied for first place at 1.45m.; Miss Lowman, England, third; Mlle. Gerner, France, fourth.

PUTTING 8-POUND SHOT—Won by Miss Lucille Godbold, United States; Mme. Gournaud Morris, France, second; Miss Maude Rosenbaum, United States, third; Mlle. A. Mejslikova, Czecho-Slovakia, fourth. Distance, 20m. 22c.

THROWING THE JAVELIN—Won by Mlle. Paianzola, Switzerland; Mlle. Gancel, France, second; Miss Flora Batson, United States, third; Mlle. Grosilmond, Switzerland, fourth. Distance, 43m. 25c.

Jonnard Twins Are Rarities in Baseball Ranks

However, Ty Cobb Digs Up Twin Outfielders to Try for Tigers.

Claude Jonnard, right-handed pitcher of the New York Giants, and his brother, Clarence, catcher of the Pittsburg Pirates, the only twins in the major leagues, will not hold that monopoly long from present indications. Manager Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers has purchased the Layne twins, Herman and Harry, from the Bristol (Tenn.) club of the Appalachian League. They are the two principal members of what is said to be the hardest hitting outfield in Class D minor league ball.

It has been a long time since the major leagues have boasted of a twin battery. As a matter of fact an old-time follower of the national game cannot recall another instance where twins were in the big show at the same time. There have been a few pairs of brothers sticking it out, for instance, the Meusels, Bob of the New York Yankees and Emil of the New York Giants.

The Jonnards are two promising players, who are enjoying their first season in the National League. They haven't been given much of a chance, but what games they have gotten into they have shown enough natural ability to warrant being retained. Claude is a rangy pitcher, acquired by the Giants from Little Rock of the Southern Association. He was used early in the season, after making the spring training trip, and was recalled. He has been used as a relief pitcher by Manager John McGraw.

Clarence Jonnard also played in the Southern Association. He was the mainstay behind the bat for Nashville. With Pittsburg he is the second-string catcher, and with Wally Schmidt donning the spangles again, he will move down another peg, unless he is released for further seasoning. However, the Jonnards are two valuable players, and may eventually win regular berths.

BABE RUTH RAISES HIS HOME RUN TOTAL TO 26

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Babe Ruth accounted for his twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth home runs of the season in yesterday's game between the Yankees and Chicago. With Dugan on base, he hit one in the first inning, the second coming in the ninth with Witt and Dugan on.

Depression Hits Boxing Business

Usual Profitable List of Labor Day Fights Not in Evidence This Year.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The business of proving that self-defense is not only a plea but an art, as one writer put it, seems to have struck a period of unwonted depression in this hitherto lucrative field. There has not been a bout of any consequence hereabouts since Leonard and Tendler said it with uppercuts. There does not appear to be one in immediate prospects.

The golden harvest moon usually shines most brightly on the eve of Labor day. It is then that the benign promoter sits down and begins counting his customers. But there are no real bouts scheduled for Labor day and probably there will be none.

Visionary discussion of a Dempsey-Brennan or a Dempsey-Wills "fight" has died down to an inaudible whisper. These enterprises have just ceased to be. Likewise the proposition that would bring Leonard and Charlie White together. Even the good Ike Dorgan, who is Mr. Rickard's publicist, has become most austere and reticent.

The affair between Harry Wills and Tut Jackson, colored gentlemen, would have been an ideal holiday attraction. But Dave Driscoll, matchmaker for Ebbets Field, scheduled the bout for the evening of Aug. 29, under the erroneous impression that Mr. Rickard was about to lure all the merry customers to Jersey City with a Labor day attraction of great merit and distinction.

BUSTER BROWN TEAM WINS HORSESHOE TITLE, DEFEATING DONNELLYS

The Buster Browns won the championship of the Municipal Horseshoe Pitchers' League yesterday by defeating the Donnelly Stars in the second half of the title match, winning nine out of 12 games. The Buster Browns won 16 of the 24 games played in the series. Washington and Forst starred for the Busters yesterday.

Washington of the Buster Browns was the leader in ringers with 59. Gross, the only member of the Donnelly Stars, who was able to win two games, was second with 53. Forst of the Buster Browns was third with 51.

The Buster Browns will be sent to Des Moines, Ia., to compete in the national tournament to be held there next week. The Brown Shoe Co. will stand the entire expense of the trip.

Ed Conrad Wins State Bike Title

Victory in Three of Five Races Qualifies Him for National Championship.

Ed Conrad of the Century Cycling Club won three of the five races yesterday morning, gaining the Missouri bicycle championship and the right to represent the State in amateur championship finals to be held at Atlantic City, Sept. 16. Conrad also finished second in two races, which enabled him to score three more points than Harry Devries of the St. Louis Cycling Club, his nearest competitor.

The results of the races follow:

ONE-QUARTER MILE SPRINT—Ed Conrad, first; Feliz Bonzon, second; Harry Devries, third. Time, 30 1-5s.

ONE-THIRD MILE SPRINT—Ed Conrad, first; Harry Devries, second; A. C. Nelsen, third. Time, 38s.

FIVE-MILE, UNPACED AGAINST TIME—Harry Devries, 12m. 24s.; Ed Conrad, 12m. 41s.; A. C. Nelsen, 13m.

The points were scored as follows: First, 5 points; second, 3 points; third, 2 points; fourth, 1 point.

IN THE WAKE OF THE BIG LEAGUES

Daniel Boone hit the trail against the Senators and not only outpitched Walter Johnson in the pinches, but smote a single with two out in the twelfth, winning his own game.

In a wild hysterical game with hats, cushions and bottles filling the air, the Giants pulled out a 5—4 decision over the Cubs. A four-run rally in the seventh, precipitated by Smith's homer, won the game.

Just to show that they have nothing up their sleeves, the Dodgers blithely tossed off both games to the Reds, 10 to 5 and 4 to 3, the Moran entry sweeping the series. George Burns, Giant refugee, made nine hits, stole five bases and scored seven runs during the three-game series.

1 Out of Every 100 People In All The World Carried by The L&N in 1921

Estimating the world's population at something over one billion souls, the astonishing figures given below show that during the year of 1921 the Louisville & Nashville Railroad transported one out of every one hundred people in the world—an average distance of forty eight and eight-tenths miles.

Think what this means to the health, the wealth and the happiness of L. & N. served territory—14,054,496 passengers employed its services as a carrier—a number greater than the entire population of America's eight largest cities—or of the entire population of the states of Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia.

Under normal conditions, or times of disturbing operating problems, the people of the South have come to appreciate the fact that they can depend on the

An entertaining as well as an artistic number on the vaudeville review program which members of the Fred W. Stockham Post No. 245, American Legion, will present next Saturday evening at the Orpheum Theater for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, will be the appearance of Raymond Koch, well-known St. Louis baritone and Stockham Post member in three songs. Koch will sing "The Old Road," by Scott, "Rose of My Heart," by Lohr, and the Toreador song from "Carmen," by Bizet. Edgar C. Smith, pianist for Stockham Post will be the accompanist.

Children Sponsors for Many Entertainments Given for Fund.

A show at 1235 Shawmut place last week netted $34 for the Milk and Ice Fund. The children who took part were: Paul Tons, Dorothy and Edith Weber, Ione and Rita Stanton, Virginia Stanton, Warren Kelly, Walter Vowels, Bernard Egan, Ralph Mulcahy, Louis Hank, Harold, Raymond and Marcella Haffner and Jeanne Gunther.

Children of the 4200 block of Hartford street gave a show which earned $28.25. Frances Huffington and Georgiana Cann managed the affair and the following participated: Marguerite Baker, Mildred Cann, Naomi Fiss, Georgia Huffington, Marcia Leah Nelson, Dorothy Mae Polman, Marie Reed, Fern Wallace and Virginia and Norman Watts. Others who contributed to the success of the show were: Raymond Betzel, George Bradford, Wilfred Kipping, Olivia Kuehne, Sidney Wagner and Everett Cann. Cake and candy were donated by the mothers and ice cream was furnished gratis by H. Casanover and grape bouquet concentrate by Anheuser Busch. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cann and Mr. and Mrs George Huffington presided at the refreshment booth.

A check for $7 came from Ethel and Mildred Goldstein, Mildred Salensky, Yetta Ellman and Mary Salensky, who gave a show at 2606 Thomas street.

An entertainment and picture show at 5150 Ridge avenue earned $4 for the fund. Those in charge were: Alice Kelly, Dorothy Duggan, Neta Hambly, assisted by Joseph Kelly, Jack Duggan and Geo. Lemberg.

Beulah Witthaus, 12 years, old; Arline Aegerter, 11 years, and Frances Norpoth, 11 years, cleared $3.25 by presenting a show for the babies at 3842 Castleman avenue.

Seven children managed a show at 1330 Bayard avenue, which brought $3.18. The children's names: Bernice Mercuria, Margaret Higgins, Sylvia Siegel, Duane Wood, Edith Hedlerich, Kenneth Schuller and Frances Saddler.

WILL SEEK CORRECTION OF ARMY BILL "ERROR"

Injustices in Officer Reductio... Plan Congressman Points Out.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Declar...ing "a serious error" was made i... the last army appropriation bill, re...sulting in many injustices throug... the method prescribed for reductio... of officer personnel, Representativ... Curry, Republican, California, an...nounced in a statement last nigh... that he would ask Congress to pas... an emergency corrective measure a... the present session.

To support his plea for imme...diate action, Curry said he had mad... a thorough investigation of the pres...ent "plucking" process, agains... which War Department officials re...peatedly have protested, and calle... attention to the recent letter writte... by Gen. Pershing to Chairman Mad...den of the Appropriations Commit...tee, declaring actual operation of th... law would result in a much greate... officer reduction than Congress ap...parently had realized.

Regards It As Emergency.

"I know that Congress is not in...clined to consider any new legisla...tion at this session," said Repre...sentative Curry's statement, "bu... after considerable investigation, ... am convinced the bill I shall intro...duce should be regarded as an emer...gency measure.

"After reading Gen. Pershing'... letter to the Committee on Appro...priations, I carefully investigated... the matter, and I am fully convince... a very serious error has been made... by the Congress; an error which... strikes at our national defense pol...icy in a vulnerable spot. If it is no... immediately corrected we canno... hope to recover from its effects in... years.

"It is not entirely a question of re...duction, but the manner in which... the reduction of officer personnel is... provided for in the act. The only... officer in the army who is assured... of retention is Gen. Pershing. I... this reduction of the number of of...ficers were on an efficiency basis o... a basis of merit, it would not be s... serious, and the army could possibly... quickly recover. It is on no such... basis.

"The act of Congress specified the... number of officers of each grade (or... rank) who are to be retained. The... practical result is that of the large... number of officers to be dropped... the greatest proportion are Captains... and Colonels. Every one familiar w... all with military affairs knows tha... they are closer to the troops than of... ficers of any other grade or rank.

Effect of the Measure.

"The act will necessitate the... dropping of highly trained and well... qualified officers because their... ranks are overcrowded, and we are... then to fill up the numbers by holding... examinations from civil life for... Second Lieutenants, most of whom... will know practically nothing of... warfare or military science."

War Department officials are dis...turbed over curtailment of the force... officers and enlisted men on duty... with the reserve officers' training... corps, "due to recent legislation re...ducing the strength of the army."... Acting Secretary Wainwright has in...formed Newton D. Baker, former... Secretary of War, and now president... of the Cleveland Chamber of Com...merce.

Wainwright pointed out that at... the present time, "the situation is... most disturbing" in the War Depart...ment because of the reduction by... Congress of the size of the army and... also of the amount of appropria...tions for the training corps.

Couple Found Dead by Shooting.

By the Associated Press.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 21.—... Mr. and Mrs. Roy T. Burlingame... of this city were found dead at their... summer home near Chaumont, near... here, yesterday, both having died of... bullet wounds. SHARP UPTURN IN RAILROAD SHARES ON STOCK MARKET

Many New Highs for Year in Near Million-Share Day —Industrial Issues Firm— Sterling Exchange Rate Higher.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"Pronounced activity and strength in rails was the feature of today's stock market. Good bidding for these issues was in evidence from the start and carried prices ahead so that gains of 1 to 2 points were common as the market closed. Many new highs for the year were established. The movement reflected increased optimism over the strike situation. Rumors of a settlement were persistent and their effect was strengthened by the statement by brotherhood chiefs that there is no danger of a sympathetic strike by the train service men. Industrials, meanwhile, remained firm, the equipments moving in sympathy with the rails. Sales ran close to the million mark, a circumstance which draws attention to the fact that the last million share session occurred on June 21. In the bond department sharp rallies in the more speculative rails carried these issues to new high marks while other descriptions were steady. Call money, after opening at 2½ per cent, was raised to 3½ and 4 per cent in the afternoon.

Sterling Shows Strength.

"In the foreign exchange market sterling continued to show strength, gaining ⅝ of a cent at $4.48¼. A steady demand for this unit was reported, a circumstance which may be explained not only by American purchases of British coal, but by large scale purchases of British rubber, which were reported by this morning's cables from London. French francs also improved and after slipping back a point from 8 cents still showed a net gain of 3 points at 7.99 cents. German marks rallied 1 point to .09¾ of a cent and the Czecho-Slovak crown pushed ahead to a new high price of 3.12 cents. The recovery in the allied currencies was not accompanied by any fresh developments with regard to the reparations situation.

Cotton Market Strong.

"Cotton remained firm, prices being helped by more hot, dry weather in Texas and by reports to the effect that the weevil is spreading in the Eastern growing areas. October was 28 points higher at a late price of 22.75 cents. Well posted observers are now placing the new crop at 11,000,000 bales, or some 500,000 bales less than the figure given in the last Government estimates."

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The stock market today had the largest and most general advance of any day since the culmination of the active speculative movement of April and May.

Trading did not reach the volume of three months ago, but the advance was more confident than at any time since then. This increasing activity as prices rose, might have been set down to one or all of three causes, either a large participation by the outside speculative public, a more vigorous effort by the Wall street pools, or an increased investment demand.

The Bond Market.

Railway bonds were the favorites again in the bond market today. The whole list was buoyantly active and the general price average reached the highest of the season so far. Among individual bonds which sold at new high prices were the St. Paul 4s of 1925, the convertible 4½s, the convertible 5s and the refunding 4½s. These bonds were carried along with the St. Paul stocks which were among the market leaders. Other railway bonds which made new highs included B. & O. 4½s, C. & O. convertible 4½s and 5s—the latter at par for the first time—the Erie lie and general 4s, M. K. & T. adjustment 5s, Northern Pacific general 4s, St. Louis & San Francisco adjustment 6s and income 6s, also the 6 per cent "B" bonds which got up to 90. Seaboard Air Line 4s and 6s, the refunding 4s and the adjustments all sold above the season's previous best and so did Southern Railway 4s, Norfolk & Western convertible 6s, B. & O. 5s, Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5s and the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico incomes.

The leaders in the industrial section were the Chile Copper 6s which sold up to 94, the Cerro de Pasco 8s and U. S. Realty 5s which made a new high of 97½.

The week began with no offerings of importance in the market for new securities.

Wheat prices improved after the early lower range on the Merchants' Exchange. The closing of Liverpool at 2⅛d to 4⅜d decline was the chief bearish factor. Seaboard reported export business aggregating 1,000,000 bushels and shorts covered. Country offering of corn was said to be smaller. Corn moved up with wheat.

In the local grain market prices generally were steady on both soft and hard wheat. There was good milling demand for soft grades. Elevators took hard. Cash corn was steady to 1c lower. Demand was active and everything was cleaned up. Cash oats were ⅛c to ⅜c lower. There was good general demand.

Weakness at Liverpool was credited with being largely the basis of the early decline. Shorts covered on the downturn. Better weather was reported in the corn belt. After the lower early basis more distant corn futures were slightly net higher.

September wheat opened at 97¼c to 97c; December wheat, 98⅞c; May wheat, $1.03½. September corn, 57½c; December corn, 51⅞c, and May corn, 55c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 270,000 bushels, compared with 520,800 a week ago and 397,200 last year, included 127 cars local and 98 through. Corn receipts, which were 157,300 bushels, compared with 244,400 a week ago and 101,400 last year, included 77 cars local and 44 through. Oats receipts, which were 176,000 bushels, compared with 146,000 a week ago and 118,000 last year, included 52 cars local and 36 through. Hay receipts were 359 tons local and 85 through.

Visible changes for the week were: Wheat increased 1,394,000 bu, corn decreased 2,319,000, oats increased 424,000, rye increased 1,237,000 and barley increased 65,000 bu.

Primary receipts of wheat today were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 2,424,000 bu. Corn receipts today were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 982,000 bu. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 1,387,000.

No. 2 rye 76c; No. 3 75c.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—After making new low prices for all deliveries of wheat the market turned stronger today and from the low prices of the morning scored a substantial advance. The main cause of the early selling was the pronounced weakness at Liverpool, that market opening at a sharp decline and later weakening still more, closing 2⅛d to 4⅜d lower, the biggest decline being on the near month. The export demand on the break here was fair, and sales were reported upwards of 500,000 bushels here, with business at the seaboard placed at about 1,000,000 bushels in all positions. The country offerings were fair, but shippers are handicapped by the lack of cars at many points. Spring wheat reports from both sides of the line were favorable. Shorts covered freely. The visible supply increased 1,394,000 bushels.

September wheat closed $1.00⅞@1.01; Dec. $1.02⅞ to $1.02½; May, $1.07⅞ to $1.07½. Wheat 1¼ to 1⅞ up.

Corn rallied with wheat, after a sharp setback in the first hour. There was a good demand for cash corn apparently and the market was steady. Country offerings were light. Export buying was of small proportions. Receipts were estimated at 240 cars. Th visible supply totals stock showed a decrease of 2,319,000 bushels.

Sept. corn closed 59⅞c; Dec., 54⅞c; May, 57⅞c. Corn ⅜c to ⅞c up.

Oats were steady throughout the day. On the early dip in other grains the market was steady and there was free buying by commission house, and by shorts which found offerings less heavy than recently. The visible supply increased 424,000 bushels. Receipts were estimated here at 250 cars, with primary receipts 1,387,000 bushels, against 1,202,000 bushels a year ago.

Sept. oats, 31⅞c; Dec., 33½@33c; May, 37⅞c. Oats ⅜c to ⅜c up.

Lard closed 7c to 30c and ribs unchanged.

NEW HIGH COTTON PRICES RECORDED AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The cotton market showed renewed strength early today with prices making new high ground for the movement on a continuation of the buying responsible for the sharp advance of last week. This was promoted by the continued strength of Liverpool, reiterated reports of an improving demand for goods, an increasing anxiety over the new crop outlook. The latter was due to a continuation of recent weather conditions over Sunday with reports of high temperatures and hot winds in Texas, and after opening firm at an advance of 31 to 53 points, active months soon showed net advances of 48 to 55 points, with December selling at 22.68. Private cables reported covering and fresh buying in Liverpool on the better tone of Manchester and bullish crop advices.

Private reports of showers at a few points in today's market over the week-end promoted realizing on the early advance, and after selling at 22.90c for December, or 48 to 55 points net higher, the market eased off some 40 points from the best. The official forecasts for generally clear weather in Texas and Oklahoma checked the decline, however, and the market was quiet later, with prices ruling around 22.60c for December shortly after midday. More trade buying has been reported this morning, but there also was considerable selling during the earlier trading, which was attributed to hedging from the South.

The detailed weather report showing high temperatures in the Southwest caused early afternoon rallies of 30 to 38 points, but they were not fully maintained as they met renewed realizing. December ruled around 22.70c at 2 o'clock, or 28 points net higher.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 21.—Spot cotton quiet; 75c higher. Sales on the spot 1,86c; to arrive, 60; low middling, 21.38c; middling, 22.63c; good middling, 23.63c; receipts, 380; stock, 53,374.

HOG TRADE IS BETTER AND PRICES RANGE UP

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Aug. 21.—Today's estimated receipts: Cattle and calves, 8500; hogs, 7000; sheep, 1500; horses and mules, 500.

CATTLE—Market was inclined to be a trifle uneven today. Most deals were nearly steady, but on some commoner and in-between classes it was steady to a shade weaker. Good steers sold strong, with $10.65 on 1300-pound cattle being the highest since 1920. Butcher stuff was steady with a few weak spots late. Stockers and feeders were unchanged. Vealers moved up to $10.50, which was 50c to $1 lower than last week. High time last week calves brought $12.25.

Quotations: Steers $10.65, bulk $7 to $9.50; cows $4 to $6; yearlings $10.45, bulk $7 to $10; canners and cutters, $2.25 to $3; bulls, $4 to $4.75; bologna, $3.25 to $4.50; stockers and feeders, $3.50 to $7.50; veals $10.50, bulk $8 to $10.25.

HOGS—Receipts light at this point and also moderate at other Western centers. Local supply estimated at 7500, a loss of nearly 3000 from last Monday. The smaller offering stimulated buyers to considerable activity and a brisk trade was noted, with prices generally 15c to 25c higher. Most of the choice light hogs cleared from $9.40 to 9.65. Market on medium and heavy weight hogs hardly as active as on the lighter kinds. Hogs of 230 to 250 pounds sold in a range of $9.15@9.30, while 270 to 280 pound hogs sold mainly $9@9.05. Packer sows steady at $7@7.25; stags, $5@6; pigs, 100 to 120 pounds, at $9@9.25, and 120 to 140 pounds, $9.20 to $9.50. Clearance was right good.

SHEEP—With a good, moderate supply on sale, there was not any material change in the market for either sheep or lambs. Good fat lambs were pretty scarce, as most of the offerings were Southwest lambs and, therefore, not very good. Best lambs sold at $12@12.25; fair grades, $11@11.75; culls, $5@6; mutton sheep, $5.50@6; breeding ewes, $6.50@7; choppers and bucks, $2@3, and canners, $1 and under.

HORSES AND MULES—Estimated to arrive were 500 horses and mules. There were around 100 head for the action. Demand centers largest on good, tasty Southern horses and mares, from 14.3 to 15½ hands high. Good Southern mules and some call for miners and pitters made the mule trade on opening session.

Butter, Eggs and Poultry

St. Louis commission houses paid the following prices to farmers and country shippers for round lots of the various articles (small orders are usually quoted higher).

LARGE CLASS INITIATED INTO KU KLUX KLAN NEAR CHICAGO

Crowd Estimated at 25,000 Witnesses Induction of Candidates, Said to Number 4650.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO Aug. 21.—Beneath the red glare of a blazing cross, a class of new Ku Klux Klansmen said to be 4650 candidates, was initiated in a huge field just outside of Chicago late Saturday night.

While thousands of voices sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers," the candidates, still garbed in their working clothes faced the cross and its circle of white-clad initiators and pledged their allegiance to the "invisible empire."

The mystic rites were held in a great field, thousands of automobiles being parked in a big circle, a quarter of a mile in diameter. In the center of the circle, outlined by headlights of the cars, was the cross, 20 feet high and wrapped in cotton. It was estimated that 25,000 persons witnessed the ceremonies, representing the 18 klans in Chicago and the 12 outside of Cook County in the State.

The klansmen began arriving long before dark and at sundown those already initiated donned their white robes. When midnight came a silent procession, headed by an imperial representative from Atlanta and the grand dragon of Illinois, marched to the cross. The candidates with hands above their heads then repeated the oath.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 21.—The Ku Klux Klan has purchased a large tract of land, including the big Percy's cave near here, it was announced yesterday by members of the local organization.

Officials said that the cave would be used for klan ceremonials. The purchase price, it was announced, was $40,000. Percy's cave is a point of interest to sightseers in the Ozarks.

DETECTIVES, AFTER CHASE, ARREST YOUTH IN STOLEN CAR

Prisoner Identified as Robber Who Took Machine From Service Car Driver.

Lawrence Osterman, 19 years old, of 2805 Norwood avenue, arrested after a chase by detectives at Ninth and Chestnut streets early yesterday while Osterman was riding in an automobile stolen by a highwayman from Clarence Sommers, 1224 Purcell avenue, a service car driver at Page and Sutter avenues, St. Louis County, Saturday night, was identified yesterday by Sommers as the robber and taken to the Clayton jail.

Sommers reported he had picked up a youth at Hodiamont and Page avenues and was headed west when the "fare" reached over the back of the front seat and pressed a revolver to his head and made him stop and get out of the machine.

Four hours later the detectives, at Ninth street and Clark avenue, saw the Sommers license on a car headed north on Ninth street. At Chestnut street they crowded the car to the side. Osterman, they reported, reached for a loaded revolver on the seat beside him. Detective McGranahan struck him in the jaw. Seven extra cartridges for the weapon were found in his pocket, the detectives said.

Osterman denied he had robbed anyone. He said he found the car with the engine running at Hodiamont and Page. He said he did not know the revolver was in the car. He admitted he had served part of a sentence in the Boonville Industrial Farm when he was 17 years old and had been paroled to his borther-in-law. His left arm is paralyzed.

DUQUOIN, Ill., Aug. 21. — The State convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America at Pinckneyville elected as president, J. C. Lambron of Kinmundy.

The union adopted resolutions favoring the repeal of the Esch-Cummins law and opposing the ship subsidy bill.

"MYSTERY ORPHAN" GIVES UP $50,000 FOR REAL FAMILY

Foundling After Court Battle Is Returned to Orphanage, Loses Legacy but Gains Relatives.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Rubert William Ross, known as the "mystery orphan," who on Friday was an heir to more than $50,000 and who was legally pronounced a foundling on Saturday, last night was speeding toward his real family in the East.

Ten years ago, the child was left on the doorstep of the Guardian Angel's Home at Joliet, that his birth might be concealed. Later his mother revealed the secret of his birth to her family while on her death bed and a search continued for nine years to regain the child.

When members of the family got in touch with the Guardian Home, they were told the boy had been sent to a Chicago orphanage. It was learned there that he had been adopted by Mrs. Ethel Hand and taken to California where he was later adopted by Mrs. Hand's parents in San Francisco.

Urged by their promise to the dying mother, members of the child's family after a court battle won their contention that the adoption in California was void as the boy had been illegally removed from Illinois. The child was returned to the custody of the Chicago asylum under a court ruling made Saturday which also deprived him of his status as sole heir to the $50,000 estate of his foster parents. The asylum then sent him back to his mother's family.

MILLIONAIRE LUMBERMAN'S SON SWEPT OFF BOAT AND DROWNED

Hundreds Search for Body of Donald Phipps, 23, Washed From Craft in Long Island Sound.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—A flying boat, scores of motor boats and hundreds of men, women and children living in the vicinity of Oyster Bay and Port Jefferson, searched the waters off Port Jefferson and the nearby shore all yesterday for the body of Donald A. Phipps, 23, son of A. J. Phipps, millionaire lumberman of Oyster Bay, who was washed from a speed boat Saturday afternoon and drowned in Long Island Sound.

Phipps, who was graduated from Yale in 1921 and had served for two years as an army aviator in France during the war, was with William Lyons, his chum, also in Yale and in the army. Engine trouble developed as they reached rough water. Phipps started toward the bow to fix the engine, when a wave swept him into the sound.

He was known to be a good swimmer and Lyons said he kept afloat for some time, yelling directions for handling the boat and turning it around to come to his rescue. After telling Lyons to shut off the engine, Phipps cried out to him to take the oars and turn the boat around. That was the last Lyons heard or saw of his friend.

60-ROOM VILLA IS BURNED

By the Associated Press.

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Fire last night destroyed the Arcadia, 60-room villa of Edson Bradley of New York and Washington, on the Canadian side of Wellesley Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley and Bishop and Mrs. Herbert Shipman escaped to safety aboard the Bradley yacht Wahtoke.

Man Dies From Gas Asphyxiation.

George E. Chalk, 42 years old, of 5411 Minnesota avenue, a contractor, died at the city hospital at 1 p. m. yesterday from gas asphyxiation. He was found last Wednesday in the kitchen of his home, seated in a chair and several burners in a gas range turned on, but not lighted. His wife was absent from the city and a son-in-law, Horace Dillow, of 6124 Alabama avenue, told the police Chalk had complained for a week of being unable to sleep because of a pain in his arm. The wife on her return to the city said she believed the asphyxiation was accidental.

MOBERLY COAL MINES OPENED

Miners Back in Pits at All Independent Workings.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOBERLY, Mo., Aug. 21.—Twenty-seven individual mine operators of Randolph and adjoining counties met in Moberly Saturday and signed the peace agreement as made in Cleveland. Practically every independent mine is being operated today. Over 700 miners who have been out of work since April 1 are back in the pits today, thus assuring Moberly immediate relief from the threatened coal shortage. The Marriott Coal Co., which is a member of the Southwestern Coal Operators' Association, did not open its mines today.

Body Taken From River.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Aug. 21.—The body of a man was taken out of the Mississippi River yesterday, partly clothed. The man had blue eyes, dark hair, weighed about 150 pounds and apparently was between 30 and 40 years old. An inquest was held by Coroner Basler and the body buried in the city cemetery.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

OLD READER.—Address the Prohibition Agents at Old Custom House, Ninth and Olive streets.

M. V. P.—Inquire of the Auto Club of Missouri for complete route from St. Louis to Rochester, N. Y.

CONSTANT READER.—Read the motion picture magazines. It would be best to have the story copyrighted.

McM.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was born in England, Jan. 27, 1850, son of Solomon and Sarah Root Gompers. He is a garment maker by trade.

BARNEY.—1. The 10 cent piece dated 1832 is worth 10c to 20c. 2. The United States Shipping Board office in St. Louis is located in the Liberty-Central Trust Building. T. Park Hay is in charge.

K. A. R.—Linen stored too long may rot, but rare linens have been known to be kept for years; they, of course, yellow with age, though to a certain extent this can be helped by wrapping the linen in blue tissue paper.

BLACK EYES.—The bugs described are water bugs and breed in dampness. Spray their haunts by means of an atomizer with equal parts of coal oil and oil of mirbane. Rid the basement of old cans, rubbish, etc.

DR. A. F. K.—The two portions of Plymouth Rock were cemented together June 15, 1921, and placed on the original site in the harbor. The break due to moving was a renewal of an old one, which was discovered at the time of the Revolutionary War, and was caused by frost action. It was then pointed to as a portent of the separation of the Colonies from England. The canopy now covering the rock is a new one erected by the Society of Colonial Dames in 1921.

RAY.—It is not proper for a gentleman to take a lady's arm at any time, except to place his hand under her elbow to help her into an automobile or assist her on and off a street car. The gentleman may offer his arm to the lady in the evening when accompanying her across the street. It is not necessary to be engaged to offer this assistance, if that is what you mean. It is merely the courtesy of a gentleman.

OLD SUBSCRIBER.—The recipe for quince preserves is: Pare, core and quarter the fruit, then weigh it and allow an equal quantity of white sugar. Put the parings and cores in a preserving kettle, cover them with water and boil for half an hour, then strain them through a fine sieve and put the juice back into the kettle, and boil the quinces in it a little at a time until they are tender. When they are done, lift them out with a drainer, lay them on a dish; if the liquid seems scarce add more water. When all are done put the sugar in the liquid and allow it to boil 10 minutes before adding the quinces. Let them boil until they change color, say 1½ hours, on a slow fire; while they are boiling occasionally slip a silver spoon under them to see that they do not burn, but do not stir them. Have two fresh lemons cut in thin slices. When the fruit is being put in jars lay a slice or two in each.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

C. K.—No state license is necessary for the mail order business in Illinois. There may be a town or city license required, however.

HENRY.—You can sue the landlord for breach of contract, since he agreed to put the house in first-class condition.

INNOCENT MAN.—You can have the slander stopped, and you can sue the man responsible for it, for damages. Consult a lawyer.

BOY.—If the soldier deserted in time of war he can still be arrested and prosecuted, but if he deserted in time of peace his prosecution is now barred by the lapse of time.

W. K.—It is not necessary, but it is desirable to draw a written partnership agreement. If you carry any stock of goods you will need a merchant's license, but not otherwise.

DISGUSTED WIFE.—You have the right to save what you yourself earn and you do not need to tell your husband how you spend your money. You can sue for a divorce or for separate maintenance, if you wish.

PHANCHION.—Under these circumstances you can marry again without being guilty of bigamy. If your first husband should prove to be alive, your second marriage would be illegal and void, but you would not be liable to any criminal prosecution.

EVA.—On the woman's death her nephews and nieces were entitled to one-half of her property. They have no share in the man's estate. Her brother or his heirs are entitled to the money which she invested for him and to the proceeds thereof.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

ARBUCKLE.—Repeat your request, enclosing stamped addressed envelope.

HATTIE.—There is no reason why the iron may not be taken in warm weather, as well as at any other season.

MARGARET.—If you will repeat your question, enclosing stamped addressed envelope, a diet list for constipation will be sent.

MARYBELLE.—The condition you describe now existing will disappear. We do not advise treatment. You may try taking a cake of yeast eaten dry or rubbed up with water, three times daily. We advise that you also have injections of vaccine. Remember if a boil is discharging, the strictest care is necessary to prevent reinfection. If a boil appears apply the following plaster: Acid salicylic 2 drams, empl. saponis 2 ounces, empl. diachyli 1 ounce. Spread on cotton cloth.

C. H.—In all cases of seborrhoea any deviation from the general health should be corrected, dyspepsia, constipation, etc. The long continued use of sulphur internally, in the form of Garrod's lozenges is often beneficial. Local treatment is of much importance. If any crusts are present they should be removed. This is accomplished if they are thick and tenacious, by soaking the parts overnight with olive oil, wear a flannel cap on the head, wash the scalp freely the next morning with equal parts of green soap and alcohol. Then use the following application: Sulphuris praecip. 1½ drams, acidi salicylici 1 scruple, vaseline 1 ounce, olei limonis, q. s. Apply a small quantity once or twice daily. In using this or any other greasy application the hair must be washed every 4 or 5 days or oftener. In using a shampoo the first time probably a great many loose hairs will come away.

WANTED BY American Refrigerator Transit Company
Car-Repair Men, Steel Workers, Machinists, Blacksmiths, Carpenters, Sheet Metal Workers and Common Laborers, for St. Louis, to work on liberal piecework basis; transportation furnished; laborers who can qualify as car men will be given car men's rates.

This company is not under the jurisdiction of the United States Railroad Labor Board as per their decision 211, June 25, 1921. We had contract with our shopmen which they flagrantly violated; contract was dated June 21, 1922 and provided for 4 days' notice by employes before discontinuing service but on the morning of July 1st our shopmen quit work without having given any previous notice to the company whatsoever. We consider those men quit work without just cause and we, therefore, find it necessary to reorganize our shop forces. Seniority commences from the date of entering our service.

WHEN A JURY MAY BE HAD IN CONTEMPT CASE

Judge Faris Rules Where Assault or Other Crime Is Involved Defendant Has Privilege.

Defendants charged with contempt of court for violation of Federal injunctions granted to prevent interference with the operation of railroads are entitled to trial by jury where the contempt charge involves assault or any other crime, Federal Judge Faris announced this morning in ordering the clerk of the court to summon a venire of 30 jurors for next Monday. The date for trial of four cases now before Judge Faris will be announced this afternoon.

The position taken by Judge Faris is in contrast with an announcement last week by Judge English in the Federal Court in East St. Louis, after he had disbarred Charles A. Karch, former United States Attorney. Judge English said he had been receiving too many requests for jury trials in contempt cases.

Judge Faris, in his ruling today, said jury trials should be granted, on demand, in contempt cases where the alleged violation of the injunction involves an offense that would be a violation of a State or Federal statute and might be prosecuted as a crime in a Federal or State court. This would include cases such as assault or other violence.

Civil Contempt Cases.

It was said that civil contempt cases, where there is no criminal charge, did not call for a jury and should be tried by the Court only. Judge Faris said violation of a court order as to the number of strike pickets that might be on duty at any point would be an instance of civil contempt.

Two of the cases in court, involving assault charges against employes of the Wabash Railroad, will be set down for jury trial. Two other charges of civil contempt will be heard by Judge Faris.

The Court held that two strikers, former employes of the Burlington Railroad at Hannibal, Mo., were entitled to a trial by jury in their own community instead of being brought here.

Interrupts His Vacation.

Judge Faris, who went to Stone Lake, Wis., July 4, on his vacation, returned to St. Louis today, two weeks ahead of his schedule, in response to a telegram from Federal Judge Walter H. Sanborn of St. Paul, Presiding Judge of the Circuit, instructing Judge Faris to hold court in St. Louis and to act as relief Judge at Kansas City in the Western District and in the Kansas and Oklahoma districts.

Judge Faris said the order for his return probably was due to the growing seriousness of the rail shopmen's strike situation.

SET STAGE FOR SUICIDE THEN WENT TO HOTEL

A man's coat, shoes, several letters and a picture of a youth and a girl were found on the edge of Fairground swimming pool, and on the back of the picture was the address, 3707 Palm street, and the notation, "I am going to end it all."

The pool was searched by lifeguards, but no body was found, and then the police went to the Palm street address, where Miss Marie Cnedker said the picture was of her and Edward Garlick of Chicago, a suitor. Miss Snedker said Garlick Saturday night had proposed marriage and was rejected. He was in a disconsolate mood, she said, and after leaving his coat, shoes and other articles in the park, boarded a car and went downtown. The police found Garlick in bed at the Madison Hotel, and he was requested to call at the North Market Street Station to get his property.

Dog Interrupts Church Service.

A bulldog entered St. Teresa's Catholic Church at 8 a. m. yesterday and interrupted mass by snapping at several persons at prayer. A policeman from the Dayton Street Station subdued the dog with his club, dragged the animal to an alley and shot it.

QUESTIONS ON SUGAR SCANDAL WORRY CROWDER

Officer, Said to Have Been Smoot's Messenger in Cuba, Abruptly Ends Interview.

HAD PROMISED TO REVEAL ATTITUDE

(Copyright, 1922.)

HAVANA, Aug. 21.—Major-General Enoch D. Crowder, President Harding's observer and personal spokesman in Cuba, abruptly ended a formal interview when questions he regarded as embarrassing were asked him concerning the World's exposure of the sugar tariff scandal.

The details of this interview, which took place last Tuesday, have just become public.

Asked what he had done with a letter from Senator Reed Smoot, spokesman of the American beet sugar interests, after he had shown it to President Zayas of Cuba last January, Crowder indignantly exclaimed:

"You don't imagine I throw important letters like that into the wastebasket, do you?"

The letter referred to was that in which Smoot agreed to drop the tariff on Cuban sugar to $1.40 per 100 pounds in the Fordney-McCumber bill, provided Cuba would curtail her normal crop of nearly 4,000,000 tons to 2,500,000 tons.

In recent articles the World has shown that such a limitation of the Cuban crop would have caused a sugar shortage in the United States and made it possible for the American beet sugar industry to boost prices and clean up many millions.

Crowder Perturbed.

All questions designed to reveal whether there was an actual or implied threat that Cuba would get a "terrific tariff" in case she refused to accede to Smoot's demands were avoided by Crowder. He became highly perturbed.

Gen. Crowder's audience for the newspaper correspondents followed an announcement that the Havana Post would begin a series of articles similar to those recently published in the World, showing that the beet sugar barons of America attempted to coerce Cuba into limiting her crop in return for a favorable tariff rate. Informed that Gen. Crowder would see them at the American legation and "show where he stood," the newspaper reporters anticipated an outspoken announcement from President Harding's representative. Instead, after a few minutes of questioning, the party ended. Crowder having vouchsafed no information of importance as to where he stood.

There was repeated to Gen. Crowder the gist of the interview appearing exclusively in the World, wherein Henry A. Rubino, authority on Cuban affairs, charged Crowder with attempting to force the crop limitation upon Cuba.

"I see," snapped Crowder, "no reason for saying more than I cabled to the World at the time the interview was printed. I am an army officer, assigned to State Department duty, and whenever a statement is desired from me I shall be told so and the statement will be issued through the State Department. But since Rubino attacked my character I have characterized his statements as maliciously false."

Questions Asked Crowder.

A series of questions prepared in advance for Gen. Crowder by the newspaper correspondents received no answers for publication. Some of the questions follow:

"Will you testify before the Senate regarding the crop reduction proposal?"

"Could it be inferred that your advisory mission to Cuba included counsel to Cuba on the best means of protecting the Cuban sugar interests involved in the last crop?"

"Do you believe the crop imbroglio had anything to do with recent outbursts from various Havana newspapers that intervention in Cuba virtually is an established fact through the so-called 'Deal government' now operating?"

The General also was asked to comment on the announcement of the Heraldo de Cuba, which declared the "Crowder amendment," meaning the alleged attempt to force a curtailment of the sugar crop, has been substituted for the "Platt amendment," under which Cuba's Constitution permits the United States to intervene in Cuban affairs when there is justification.

The Havana News, in articles defending Crowder's activities in Cuba, represents the General as acting merely in an advisory capacity to President Zayas." It is attempting to create the impression that the Cuban producers, instead of Senator Smoot and the American beet sugar barons, tried to compel Cuba to limit her sugar crop so that a resultant scarcity of sugar in America would make the price mount.

Defeat by the United States Senate on Friday of the amendment making the tariff on Cuban sugar $1.40 and $1.60, and incorporation in the bill of the $1.84 rate, has created here the impression that Senator Smoot carried out his threat to punish Cuba for not curtailing her crop. The Havana newspapers are saying this is a tax equaled only by that imposed upon "superfluous articles of luxury."

German Student Flyer Breaks Gliding Record by Staying in Air 2 Hours and 10 Minutes

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

GERSFELD, Germany, Aug. 21.

GERMANS have again smashed all records for gliding flights. While motorless plane competitors in France have considered a five-minute flight excellent and a two-minute one unusual, two aviation students from Hanover, Hentsen and Martens, have demonstrated their ability to remain in the air for an almost unlimited time, if weather conditions are favorable.

Yesterday, Hentzen, a student flier of the Hanover Technical School, utilizing every air current, maintained an altitude of about 200 meters, crossing back and forth over the field for more than two hours. The actual time is said to have been 2 hours and 10 minutes. Only when it was dark did he descend. This flight beats Martens' 66-minute stay in the air, and Martens already had broken all world's records. And both these flights were only the elimination tests preliminary to the real competition. But they have been such a success that the 100,000 marks offered by aircraft manufacturers were won before the preliminaries were finished. The actual contests this week promise even greater achievements.

Can Emulate the Bird.

The gliding at this little town in the Rhone Valley seems to prove that man can emulate the soaring bird and promises well for a practicable plane with a light engine.

Weather conditions were unusually favorable for the record flights. The hills of Thuringia, partly cloudy sky and a warm sun formed powerful ascending and descending air currents. By utilizing the ascending currents and avoiding the descending ones, the German gliders have remained in the air longer than anyone imagined to be possible.

Their achievement is as much due to the advancement in the study of air currents and their relation to ground contours as to improvement in the planes themselves.

Lilienthal's Theory the Basis.

The German achievements are cited as results of the theories advanced by Gustav Lilienthal, pioneer constructor of the motorless plane. Lilienthal was one of the early students of aviation, who went deeply into the problem of maintaining equilibrium. Natural air currents were utilized and the aviators obtained balance and stability through the movement of their own bodies or through the action of portions of their aircraft which they had under control.

In a machine with bat wings and depending on gravity as its motive power, Lilienthal made more than 2000 glides safely, but finally was killed in 1896, when his machine was overturned by a sudden gust of wind.

No news has been received by the management of the meet regarding the prospects of the entry of Edmund Allen, who is flying at Clermont Ferrand under the auspices of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Farman in Air Minute and 2 Seconds; Fetu Dies.

(Copyright, 1922.)

CLERMONT FERRAND, France, Aug. 21.—Owing to weak breezes only two flights were attempted yesterday. Boussoutrot in his Farman was up for 1 minute 2 seconds and Coupet made a flight for 1 minute 45 seconds.

Edmund T. Allen, the American competitor, left last night for Gersfeld for the German glider competition. He does not yet know whether he will be allowed to compete. Pilot Fetu, who was injured when his Bellanger biplane fell here during Thursday's competition, died yesterday.

NEW U. S. DIRIGIBLE MAY FLY TO POLES, ADMIRAL ASSERTS

Craft Now Being Built Will Be Larger Than One Lost in England, Moffet Says.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Battleships have not been rendered obsolete by the building of bombing planes, but the ships must be built differently in the future, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the division of aeronautics of the United States Navy, said in an address at the Pageant of Progress yesterday.

He pointed out that airplanes must alight some time and that naval battles were often fought in the middle of the ocean. His department, he said, is developing a type of plane that can be carried on shipboard with an arresting device whereby a plane can be stopped in 40 feet after alighting, and catapults by which they can be launched into the air.

He asserted that a dirigible is being built near Philadelphia that will be larger than the one destroyed in England a few months ago. A transcontinental flight and flights to the North and South Poles and around the world are being planned for the dirigible, he said.

Admiral Moffett, Mrs. Moffett and the Admiral's aid, Lieutenant-Commander E. W. Spencer, will fly back to Washington today.

VON HINDENBURG DRAWS BLAME

Visit to Munich Today Regarded as Effort to Control Government.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—A great demonstration to be held at Munich today in honor of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, who will pay a visit to Prince Leopold and then drive through the city to the former court gardens, where a semipublic reception will be held in the form of a regimental reunion, provokes resentment here. It is characterized as a studied affront to the Central Government while the dispute with Bavaria over the law for the defense of republic is still under negotiation.

Von Hindenburg is blamed for accepting an invitation which can only contribute to the Central Government's embarrassment despite the fact that his appearance in Munich is designated as of a private character.

HOUSE GETS BACK TARIFF BILL, YEAR AFTER ACTING ON IT

Republican Leaders Plan to Send Measure to Conference With Senate, Under Special Rule.

2000-ODD POINTS MUST BE ADJUSTED

Question of American Valuation as Basis of Ad Valorem Duties May Be Referred Back to House.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The House received the tariff bill back from the Senate today, just a year and a month after it first acted upon it. Republican leaders plan to send it to conference under a special rule with Representatives Fordney of Michigan, Green of Iowa, and Longworth of Ohio, Republicans, and Garner of Texas and Collier of Mississippi, Democrats, as the probable House conferees.

The Conference Committee will begin this week the task of composing the 2000-odd differences between the Senate and the House. The question of American valuation, which the House approved as the basis of assessing ad valorem duties, may be referred to the House for a special vote, Representative Fordney having announced that he would hold out for this plan in conference and let the House settle the issue.

The general expectation at the Capitol is that the House will recede, accepting the Senate foreign valuation plan with the so-called flexible tariff provisions.

New Era in Tariff Making Seen by Senator Johnson.

By the Associated Press.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Aug. 21.—"The action of the Senate upon the tariff bill just passed marks a new era in tariff making," declared Senator Hiram W. Johnson in a statement issued yesterday.

"Heretofore," the statement continued, "tariff bills have been written presumably around the desires and needs of the East and the great middle states. The present bill recognizes finally the desires and needs of the great West."

BANKERS' SCHEME FOR EUROPE TO BE OUTLINED

Financiers to Back Plan to Be Presented at Institute of Politics.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 21.—A detailed bankers' scheme for the rehabilitation of Europe will be presented for the world's consideration during the final arguments by B. M. Anderson Jr. of the Chase National Bank, and will have the approval of other banking participants at the Williamstown conference. Paul M. Warburg and Paul D. Cravath will return to the Institute of Politics to support Dr. Anderson's plan.

Those in favor of the remission of all or part of debts due to America from the allies are said to be convinced that no constitutional objection need be encountered in carrying out the proposed program. The cancellation is held justifiable either under the general welfare clause of the Constitution or as part of the military expenses incurred during the war.

Need for Settlement.

According to the cancellationists, the worst possible course for America to pursue would be to leave the question of interallied debts unsettled. The existence of these debts raises the hopes of the American people that large sums of money will be forthcoming from abroad, and, it is said, stimulated the "bonus" demand, which would otherwise diminish.

The proceedings of the institute will end next Friday in what was called at one of the round tables "a final dog fight," for which the British delegate, Philip Kerr, it is understood, is reserving his statement on reparation and foreign debts. Kerr also is believed to have in preparation a highly controversial lecture to be delivered on one of the last days of the conference.

B. M. Anderson's scheme for European rehabilitation is to be more concrete than the one presented recently by former Secretary of the Treasury David E. Houston, in which the latter advocated joining the League of Nations and imposing economic and other conditions on Europe as the price of America's help.

Conclusions on Siberia.

Among the important conclusions reached at the institute appears to be a general agreement in the round-table discussions that some steps should be taken to encourage and strengthen a Government in Siberia. The most important contribution on this point was a speech by President David P. Barrows on Japan's foreign policy in Siberia and China.

It also is seen that the proceedings at the Institute of Politics are attracting the attention of foreign countries, which are likely in the future to pay more attention to such a storm center of discussion as the Williamstown Institute and such a potential factor in the molding of American public opinion. It is hoped that in future years the institute will be attended by a considerable number of American public men as a counterbalance to the strong influence exerted by public lectures by foreign visitors.

COTTAGE COLONY IN FLORIDA FOR ELDERLY PERSONS PLANNED

Method of Helping Aged to Care for Themselves Being Worked Out by Moose.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—A plan for helping elderly persons to care for themselves through the establishment of a great cottage colony of 1000 acres of land in Florida was announced yesterday at the opening of the thirty-fourth international convention of the Loyal Order of Moose at Mooseheart, Ill.

The site will be about 14 miles south of Jacksonville, Fla., on the west bank of the St. Johns River, where a hotel with 100 rooms, which will be used as a sanitarium, and 23 surrounding acres of land already have been purchased. The formal launching of the project is expected to take place this fall.

Under the present plans, according to Rodney Brandon, supreme secretary of the order, the community will be entirely self-supporting, the belief being that old people can take care of themselves without charity if properly organized and given the opportunity.

An appropriation of $100,000 was made to start the project and an additional $100,000 a year will be used to support it, according to the announcement.

E. J. Henning, Assistant Secretary of Labor, said that President Harding would be in attendance at the convention next Friday and preparations are being made for a big pageant in his honor.

OPPOSE SHIP SUBSIDY BILL

By the Associated Press.

PINCKNEYVILLE, Ill., Aug. 21.—Resolutions opposing the ship subsidy bill, favoring representation of farmers on the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank system, and favoring the repeal of the Esch-Cummins act, were adopted here at the closing session of the 10-day State convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America, it was made known yesterday.

The following State officers of the organization were elected: J. C. Lambron of Kinmundy, president; George Weiss of Nashville, vice president, and George Huggins of Duquoin, secretary and treasurer.

BANKERS' REPORT ADVISES AGAINST TRADE WITH RUSSIA

Conditions Under Communistic Regime Set Forth in Statement by American Association.

IMPORTS BOUGHT WITH GOLD RESERVE

Germans Said to Have Done but Little Business in Soviet Country Because of Unacceptable Conditions.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—"Regardless of the attitude of the Department of State toward the soviet government of Russia, the internal conditions of Russia and the policy of the soviet government are such that for the time being American business could gain very little by dealings with that country," it is declared in a study of Russian conditions made public here today by the Commerce and Marine Commission of the American Bankers' Association.

"Even under a trade agreement our exports to Russia could not have been large in the past and cannot become large in the near future," says the report. "Similarly, nothing our Government could do would increase in any important degree private investment in that country. Great as is Russia's need of foreign goods and foreign capital, its internal conditions and the policy of its rulers are such as almost to preclude the possibility of obtaining the one or the other. * * * Except on credit, people can import goods only if they have something with which to pay for them. Russia has almost no such means of payment."

"Although Russia has imported considerable quantities of goods, soviet statistics show the amount in 1921 on the basis of 1914 prices was only about $125,000,000 or less than one-fifth the pre-war annual importation," says the report. "The total American exports, direct and indirect, to soviet Russia amounted to about $19,000,000 in 1921, or seven-tenths the 1913 exports to the Russian Empire from the United States.

Paid for With Gold Reserve.

"The most significant fact about Russian imports, it is declared, is that they have been paid for almost entirely out of the gold reserve of the former Empire. The total exports of soviet Russia during 1921, according to figures of the bolshevik authorities, were only about $10,500,000, which was about one-seventh the 1913 figure.

"Before the war, exports somewhat exceeded imports; in 1921 the imports were more than 12 times the exports in value," the article continues. "The difference was made up by gold. In the light of the extreme hardship which an inconceivably depreciated currency is causing in Russia, this exportation of gold must be considered a grave and possibly irreparable blow to the future financial situation of the country.

"The prospect of Russia having an important export surplus in the near future, is most discouraging. It must not be forgotten that before the war, 70 per cent of Russia's exports were agricultural products—foodstuffs, flax, hides, wool, etc. A large proportion of Russia's imports today consist precisely of foodstuffs. The worst famine of modern times is gripping the country.

"Meantime, there has been still more enormous fall in the productivity of other industries, and small likelihood appears that any of them can produce an important export surplus for some time to come. Were the soviet authorities to throw the doors of Russia wide open to trade, there might be, for a short time, a considerable exportation of the treasuries of pre-war households.

"Apart from an inherent lack of the wherewithal for commerce, grave obstacles have been placed in the path by the soviet government itself. The normal machinery of trade does not exist. Everything is subject to extreme government control. In principle, foreign trade is a Government monopoly, and such commerce as it permits semi-private organizations to carry on is subject to far-reaching regulation. Let no one suppose that if the American Government should make a trade agreement with Russia the American manufacturer or merchant could sell goods directly to the Russian dealers or consumers. He would have to sell to the Russian Government or to agencies controlled by it. Some goods he would not be permitted to sell at all, and for all his goods the price would be fixed by the Government.

Export Purchases.

"The purchase of export goods takes place upon the Russian market without restriction. Payment may be made in Russian money or foreign, but in the latter case only through the intermediation of the State Bank. An export permit has to be obtained from the Foreign Trade Commissariat."

The report points out that Russians defend extreme Government control on the ground that, with Russia so impoverished, were trade free, the people would be forced to pay exorbitant prices for imported goods and could get only ridiculously low prices for their products and their accumulated treasures. It adds:

"Ultimately the co-operatives may prove the salvation of Russian agriculture, as well as become the leaders in restoring foreign trade. For the time being, however, they enjoy powers far from extensive, they can at best do little to increase the exports of Russia, and they stand slight chance of obtaining any considerable credits for imported goods."

"If there is little promise for American business in participation in trade with Russia, there is even less in the investment of capital in Russian industry.

"Foreign capitalists in general will not believe that they possess sufficient protection so long as the soviet government continues to hold confiscated property of foreigners and even to fail to compensate them for it. It is the common notion that while American business men are kept back, or themselves voluntarily hold back from transactions in Russia, the Germans are going in on a large scale and gaining control of trade and enterprise. As a matter of fact, the Germans have done comparatively little because they too have found the terms imposed by the Russian government unacceptable."

A large part of the hesitation of business men to take up leases and grants offered by the soviet is attributed to the declaration of the Soviet leaders that present concessions to capitalism are but temporary expedients, to be succeeded by a reversion to thorough-going communism later. Soviet agreements, it is pointed out, are for short periods with no assurance of renewal.

The political risk involved in undertaking private enterprise in Russia, it is declared, is probably less than might be thought, since the experience under communism, the benefits of private management and the non-communistic attitude of the people will bring about an extension of normal business methods. The pamphlet goes on:

"If only reasonable terms of lease or concession could be obtained at the outset, the risks of the capitalist or business manager in engaging his money or his ability in Russia would probably lie less in the uncertainties of public opinion or of politics than in the practical economic conditions under which business must be conducted.

Objectionable Conditions.

Among the many conditions militating against success are: Lack of sufficient freedom, inefficiency of those branches of business still remaining under Communist administration, habits or idleness and insubordination on the part of labor, engendered under Communism, and above all, the general ruin of agriculture, industry and transportation. The success of any individual business is, in most though not all cases, dependent on the success of other business. The factory must have coal, transportation and raw materials. * * * The full prosperity of any enterprise undertaken in Russia can in general be achieved only on the condition of general rehabilitation throughout the country. * * *

As instances of conditions in agriculture, the grain area has declined more than 40 per cent; only 17,000,000 horses, or about half the number Russia had in 1913, now survive, and of a vastly inferior grade; the reduction in cattle has been about the same, while the losses of sheep and swine have been greater. Even more depressing data are given for many other lines of agriculture and industry.

The report says in conclusion: "Such is a picture drawn directly from bolshevik sources of the status of economic life in Russia at the present time. Whatever one may think as to the extent to which the unfortunate conditions described are attributable to the Communist system, it is perfectly evident that these conditions have a very important bearing upon the possibility of trading with Russia and upon the wisdom of investing capital there. What with the restrictions which the bolshevik government imposes upon the conduct of trade and of enterprise, there is very little to tempt American business men at the present time to undertake business with Russia. It is earnestly to be hoped that there may be changes in policy and improvement in conditions which will make trade and investment more practicable, but for the time being, the obviously wise policy for American business in general is that of watchful waiting. Here and there some particular commercial transaction or industrial enterprise may possibly be undertaken with profit but these instances are the exception."

Soviet Foreign Minister Says Moscow Desires to Send Investigating Commission to Washington.

By SAMUEL SPEWACK,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1922, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

MOSCOW, Aug. 21.—If the United States wants to send an investigating commission to Russia, the soviet government will insist on sending a Bolshevist investigating committee to Washington, unless the United States announces beforehand its intention to conclude a trade agreement.

This is the official soviet position as given to me by acting Foreign Minister Karakhan. His statement was made after long deliberation by soviet officials, and does not merely represent M. Karakhan's personal view.

Well-founded reports that American representatives have unofficially sounded out soviet officials as to their attitude toward a commission to investigate the possibility of a trade agreement led to M. Karakhan's statement.

Moscow Favorable to Plan.

Moscow is anxious to have such reciprocal commissions, although it is understood the suggestion came from America. M. Karakhan declares the Russians want to investigate buying possibilities in America, and that the Bolshevists want to establish some sort of official representation in the United States.

The soviets have grown wary of American capitalists claiming that the success of their particular deals will decide American policy in Russia.

"We are as anxious as ever to establish friendly relations with America," said M. Karakhan. "We welcome American capital, though not on the same terms as it gets in China, for example. But unless America signifies a desire to sign a trade agreement, this investigation commission will not be permitted in Russia unless ours goes to Washington."

Conference Being Arranged.

Meanwhile, diplomatic communication relative to the proposed Russo-Japanese conference on far Eastern affairs are still being exchanged. The choice for the meeting place now lies between Pekin and Harbin, China. M. Karakhan says the soviets prefer Pekin, as it is most convenient.

The Chinese have not been consulted, because, as M. Karakhan says, there seems to be no doubt China will agree to it. China will be invited to take part in the conference after purely Russo-Japanese questions are disposed of.

"Russia does not want to sovietize Asia," declared M. Karakhan. "It has been said we are holding Mongolia by force. True, we have an army there, but this is due to the request of the Mongolian nationalists, who wanted the army to remain after we defeated the White army.

"Our army insures one peaceful front in China, and as soon as the Mongolians have their own army we will evacuate. We have nothing to gain, even if we were imperialists."

Russia Invites Border States to Arms Limitation Parley.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Aug. 21.—In a note to the states bordering on Russia, in which it is suggested that a conference be fixed for Sept. 5 in Moscow, the Russian Foreign Office has revived the proposal made by M. Litvinoff prior to The Hague conference for mutual limitation of armament.

Address Latvia, Esthonia, Finland, Rumania and Poland, M. Ganetsky, the soviet Deputy Minister, declares that none of the replies from the border states to M. Litvinoff's note could be considered a definite refusal and that therefore the proposed conference should be held.

MOVE TO HALT SMUGGLING OF ALIENS INTO U. S. THROUGH CUBA

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Representations have been made to the Cuban government by the State Department looking to steps to prevent further smuggling of Chinese and Europeans from the Island into the United States.

The American Government is understood to have taken the position that entry to Cuba is obtained upon the belief that eventually the aliens can be smuggled into this country. Approximately 30,000 Chinese and about 40,000 aliens from Europe are now in Cuba awaiting opportunity to enter this country surreptitiously, in the belief of Secretary Davis of the Department of Labor.

The Labor Department was said by Davis to be convinced that Bolshevist and Communists are resorting to subterfuge to get their agitators into this country. He had no doubt, he added, that many of those who participated in the killing of miners at Herrin, Ill., were aliens who had been sumggled into the country and who, had there been a national registration law for aliens, would never have had the opportunity to precipitate a "tragedy" that shocked the world."

HUGHES DECLARES NEWBERRY FAILED TO GET JUSTICE

Says Conviction of Michigan Man Was Based Upon Serious Misconstruction of Statute.

"ENTITLED TO SEAT AS U. S. SENATOR"

Finding Based on Charge of Campaign Expenditures in Excess of $3760, Michigan's Limit.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Secretary Hughes, in a letter made public last night by the Republican National Committee, expresses the conviction, after a review of the Newberry case, "that Senator Newberry was wrongly and most unjustly convicted."

The Secretary, writing to the Rev. Hugh B. McCaulley of Paterson, N. J., in response to an inquiry as to the "facts" in the Newberry case, gives in detail the findings of the courts, especially the Supreme Court, which set aside the conviction of Newberry, and then concludes:

"Despite the long period of preparation, the rigid investigation, the careful choosing of their ground, the long-drawn-out trial, the attempt in every possible way to besmirch, and the zeal, ability and even bitterness of his pursuers, their endeavor to establish a violation of the law on the part of Senator Newberry completely failed and, accordingly, Senator Newberry stood as Senator duly elected by the people of the State of Michigan and entitled to his seat in the Senate of the United States."

Hughes expressed the belief that "there seems to be a general misconception of the nature of the litigation and its results. Senator Newberry has suffered in consequence a most serious injustice."

Ground of Conviction.

"The conviction of Senator Newberry," he continues, "was obtained under a statute held by the majority of the Supreme Court to be invalid; rested upon a ground which did not involve any finding by the jury of moral turpitude, and was effected only by a most serious misconstruction of the statute, which exposed him to conviction regardless of any moral offense upon his part, and no matter how high-minded he might have been in his conduct in the campaign."

The Secretary, who, as counsel for Newberry and his associates, participated in arguments in the case before the Supreme Court, further declares in his letter that "it should be borne in mind that Senator Newberry's conviction in the lower court was not based on any charge of fraud or corruption or of the use of money for any illegal purposes or of any act involving moral turpitude."

Campaign Expenditures.

Hughes then explained that the conviction of Newberry was based solely on the charge that there had been an expenditure in his campaign and election of more than $3750, the limit fixed by the statute of the State of Michigan, and that the Federal corrupt practices act made it unlawful for a candidate to spend in excess of the limit fixed by state law.

"Senator Newberry could not have been convicted," Hughes adds, "even upon this charge, without what I always regarded, and so stated in my argument to the Supreme Court, as an extraordinary misapplication of the statute upon which the charge was based."

Other counts of the indictment returned against Newberry, including that charging a conspiracy to commit a number of offenses, Hughes emphasizes, were set aside and the jury in the trial rendered a verdict of not guilty of the charge of a conspiracy to defraud by use of the mails.

Discussing the decision of the Supreme Court at length, Hughes points out to his correspondent that the majority opinion of the Court held that the Federal statute was unconstitutional and that therefore the conviction should be set aside and that the other four Justices, while not concurring on the question of the constitutionality, joined in reversing the judgment of conviction because the statute had been seriously misconstrued by the trial court.

Bulgarian Blockade Threatened.

Legalizing Thievery.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE late Senator Dolliver of Iowa was one of the greatest statesmen of his generation. His sympathies were always on the side of the toiling masses. He probably has no equal in the present Senate. The following paragraphs taken from one of his speeches on the Payne-Aldrich tariff act in 1909 are refreshing:

As the result of my observations upon the different tariffs of the world (and I do not pretend to be wise or deeply read about the matter), I have found that wherever there is a protective tariff it has built up a system of morality of its own, and I have never found that its rules of morality are in accord with any other rules of morality, religious or secular, ever framed in this world. It has built up a system of morality in this country that not only is wicked, but it allows to be done by authority of law what the man who does it would never do in his private capacity as a citizen. It permits a man not only to covet his neighbor's goods, but to take them away from him by force of law.

When we consider that we collected a little over $300,000,000 last year, and the people of this country paid in taxation to protected interests $2,100,000,000, I think it is about time we were considering whether we are not taxing the American people a little too far.

How much will the people pay to the protected interests under the pending tariff bill in order for the Government to collect in taxes as much as it would collect by the much less painful process of a tax on light wines and beer?

THE Democrats need not worry about the Republicans who voted the Democratic ticket in the primary—many are going to vote it this fall. We are so disgusted with the Republican tactics, both in Washington and Jefferson City.

AN EX-REPUBLICAN.

What a State Constabulary Means.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I SEE in the papers that certain men are touring Southern Illinois making speeches on good roads, but winding up by telling the people the advantage in having State troops to patrol the cities and county, but not mentioning the word "constabulary." That is a word of woe to every working man, woman and child in states where it has been established. I will say here to the common people of Illinois if you have State police you will be sorry many a day, even in the rural districts.

I lived many years near one of the large steel mills in Pennsylvania where labor troubles were frequent. Large numbers of men would congregate on vacant lots to talk over their grievances during these troubles. The constabulary would ride along and disperse these groups, and if they refused to go they would trample them under their horses' feet. I have seen them run their horses over women and children. I have seen them use their steel whips that brought blood at every stroke. I would not live in a state where they have state patrol troops. People who do live in these few states feel just the same as the Big Four railway brotherhood men who are working under guards and Deputy United States Marshals in the railroad yards where the strike is on.

I hope the lawmakers of Illinois are too intelligent to pass a measure like this. There are too many men, too many societies trying to edge in, pretending to devise plans so that there will be no more labor troubles. These men make a bad matter worse.

Why can't the owners of these plants be like the manufacturer in Detroit who puts out a tin Lizzie every 30 seconds? They have no labor troubles there, because he pays his men a living wage and appreciates their work, and uses the friendship instead of riot guns.

Where the "Toonerville Trolley" Failed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MR. LEAHY complains in your columns that the people of Walnut Manor have forsaken the "Toonerville" Trolley, which the Jennings Street Railway Co. operates for the convenience of the people of this community.

Why do the people prefer to use jitneys and the bus line? Because, although there are three times as many people living in this community as there were two years ago, the street car company still maintains the old schedule of a car every 20 minutes. Although morning and evening the car was crowded to the very steps, there was not sufficient transportation to get the people to work. When the car running from West Florissant to Melrose avenue was broken down for several days at a time, although fare was collected for the entire distance the people were compelled to walk the mile and a quarter. As a rule the cars were so filthily dirty that the people hated to ride in them. That's why.

D. M. HAZLETT.

BUSINESS SHOULD PROTEST.

Three Republican Senators come out of the tariff mess with clean hands—Borah, who voted against it, and La Follette and Norris, who were paired against it. Lenroot, by supporting the measure on final vote, clouded his admirable record of opposition to its most infamous levies. He apologizes for his vote with the statement that unless some of the bill's enormities are corrected in conference he will vote against the conference report.

What may happen to this bill in conference cannot be forecast. It is a fair inference, however, in view of the confident statements of the party leaders that the bill will reach the President within a month, that nothing revolutionary will occur. As to what will happen if the party leaders press this ruinous folly to a conclusion there can be no informed doubt.

The warning that La Follette sounded to his colleagues when the Payne-Aldrich law was in the making ought to act as an injunction to the present madness. He told them in substance that a betrayed and swindled constituency would see to it that they were retired to private life. The truth of his prophecy is a matter of record. And the primary results of the last few months, including the political demise of Senator McCumber, one of the co-authors of the present bill, should be proof enough that history is about to repeat itself. But this seeming certainty of public wrath and vengeance is deliberately ignored by the party leaders.

The wrecking of the Republican party, however, will be but a mere episode in the tragic consequences of this customs law. Among its inevitable effects, unless economic miracles come trooping in to the rescue, will be the worst buyers' strike in our experience. That is inescapable. With labor deflation already a largely accomplished fact and with the demand for further wage reduction still insistent, the McCumber-Fordney tariff will send prices soaring to all but prohibitive levels. The American dollar may not overtake the vanishing mark and the ridiculous ruble, but it will be headed in that worthless direction. Its purchasing power—the source of industrial sustenance—will be critically, if not disastrously, impaired. How, pray, can the American consumer pay inflated prices with deflated, fewer dollars?

It is not to be assumed that all the intelligence and honesty of the Republican party is centralized in the three Senators of that party who oppose this bill. But Borah, La Follette and Norris at least furnish a nucleus which seemingly might be developed, with a decisive display of sentiment, into a restraining force. American business, with its organization and facilities of expression, ought to protest the enacture of this bill in its present form. It should memorialize Congress to stop while there is yet time. Failing there, it might go over the head of Congress to the White House in an appeal for a veto. It would not be unbecoming in American business to exercise all its proverbial skill, energy and influence in the vital matter of self-preservation which the destructive taxation of this tariff bill seriously threatens.

THE CHRISTIAN SCOTS.

"Canny Scot" is a misnomer. Scotchmen have acquired new grounds on which to refute the imputation of that epithet. While they are renowned for a hard-boiled orthodoxy in religion they are also famous in song and humor for their ability to pinch a nickel. As to which national characteristic would dominate when the two came into conflict the world, it must be confessed, has yielded itself largely to cynicism.

There has been a disillusionment. The report of working conditions in the American steel industry by the investigators of the Interchurch World Movement was read by Americans who were fortunate enough to subscribe to newspapers which printed it, the revelations were deplored, and there has not been much more said or thought about it. We have yet to hear of low bids in America being rejected because of the intolerable working conditions under which the product was made.

It remained for Scotland, many months after the Interchurch World Movement was strangled by the withdrawal of corporation support, to afford us such a thrill. It remained to the Glasgow Corporation to sacrifice "hard business sense" for Christianity when it rejected the lowest bid on a contract to supply street car rails because the bidder was agent for the United States Steel Corporation, whose treatment of workers was reported by the interchurch investigators to be anti-Christian.

And so conscientious Glasgow will pay more for her street car rails, but her people will have the satisfaction of feeling that they are not profiting on the misfortune of workers held practically in slavery by the 12-hour day and by denial of the fundamental civil rights of free speech, free assemblage and equality before the law.

Legislation is necessary, says Secretary Hoover, to control fuel distribution and prices this winter. And legislation must be supplemented, we should say, with a big stick.

BROTHERHOODS AND GUARDS.

An engineer and a fireman, members of the "big four" brotherhoods, were the victims of the malicious wrecking of an express train on the Michigan Central Railroad before daylight Sunday morning. The murder and vandalism was accomplished by pulling up the spikes that held a rail in place.

The tragedy immediately calls to mind the attitude of the brotherhoods on the guarding of railroad property. There have been numerous suspensions of work, tying up of trains, continual expressions of dissatisfaction and threats to join the shopmen's strike because of the presence of guards on railway property. We have noted no loss of life or injury to the persons of brotherhood members, however, from the action of railway guards. The death list is confined thus far to a tragic instance of unguarded property.

A dry clause will be kept out of the new State Constitution for fear the people would object to it. Their objection to a similar clause in the Federal Constitution, of course, doesn't matter.

PROGRAM VS. PARALYSIS.

David F. Houston has presented before the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass., a complete program for the rehabilitation of Europe. Every plan evolved by qualified statesmen and students is a contribution to the wisdom required for the solution of our own and the world's most urgent problem. Every such plan should be gratefully seized upon by our Washington Government and examined for advice and suggestions which, if approved, should be incorporated into a Government program of action.

But this is just where the administration differs with the constructive thought of the time. It has no program and shows no signs of wanting any. Its attitude is well represented at the Institute by Oscar T. Crosby, who interposed an objection to nearly every one of Mr. Houston's proposals. The Missourian asserted, relative to our participation in European councils, that discussion could not bind this nation. "The delegates," he said, "could only deliberate, advise and report." To which Mr. Crosby replied that such participation was a mistake, when, as he declared, it was quite impossible for any American representatives to hold power to negotiate agreements binding on the American people.

This is to assert that, as regards international relations, the United States has no Government, that it functions only as a domestic Government except for the power to declare war and make peace. It is the attitude now assumed by the Washington Government toward Europe, although the administration, by calling the Washington conference, has demonstrated that it knows better. Mr. Crosby fears that any attempt on the part of our Government to negotiate agreements would be followed by misunderstandings, owing to the possibility that we might change our mind, and that these might eventually lead to a war of all European nations combined against the United States.

This is a speculation well worthy of a grammar school debating society. It is perhaps as good a defense as may be contrived, however, for the administration policy of attacking a great problem by twiddling its thumbs and maintaining a ponderous reserve.

D'Annunzio is keeping up the traditions of aviation by having dared the empyrean only to be saved for serious injury from a tumble of six feet from his own window.

A BOOST FOR THE FLAPPER.

We notice that the flappers
Are marketing their wares;
In spite of jealous "rappers,"
They succeed in getting "theirs."

And great, big, husky strappers,
As keen as butcher knives,
Are picking up the flappers
And taking them for wives.

We know that many flappers
Have great domestic charms,
And in embroidered wrappers
Carry babies in their arms.

So do not rap the flappers;
Remember, there are others,
Who for men are crafty trappers,
And refuse to act as mothers.

CRUSHED PANETELA.

Now we have it, sweet Luella—
Mr. Harding tells it all.
Seems we're at the miners' mercy—
Waning summer—coming fall.
Trains are running just as usual,
Tho we note that some are late;
Mr. Harding makes it plain, dear,
It's a matter mere of fate.
Seemingly the cure's at hand, dear,
Tho' we know not what it is.
Once it gets here, have no fear, dear,
Industry will fairly whiz.
Just a little patience, dearie—
Just a little trust in God.

Sir: There has been a "Good Luck" letter going the rounds, and a number of business men have responded according to the injunction it contains. Here is the letter:

"Good Luck! Copy this and send it to nine (9) friends whom you wish good luck. This chain started by an American officer should go three times around the world. Do not break this chain, for whoever does, will have bad luck. Do it within 23 hours, and before nine days you will have some great good fortune. 'Remember, if you believe it, it's so.' Keep the ball rolling."

Accompanying is a list of names, amounting to 30 to 40 in this particular chain.

The person who started this was either carrying out a deep-laid scheme or had little conception of what the result of his chain would amount to if carried out. The figures are:

The 1st set of letters	9
The 2d set of letters	81
The 3d set of letters	729
The 4th set of letters	6,561
The 5th set of letters	59,049
The 6th set of letters	531,441
The 7th set of letters	4,782,969
The 8th set of letters	42,046,721
The 9th set of letters	387,420,489
The 10th set of letters	3,486,784,401
The 11th set of letters	31,381,059,609
The 12th set of letters	282,429,536,481
The 13th set of letters	2,541,865,828,329
The 14th set of letters	22,876,792,454,961
The 15th set of letters	205,891,132,094,649
The 16th set of letters	1,853,020,188,851,841
The 17th set of letters	16,677,181,699,666,659
The 18th set of letters	150,094,625,296,999,121
	168,858,464,709,124,100

Reducing this to costs, two cents postage and one-half cent for stationery, to say nothing of time spent in writing the letter, the total cost, in carrying out the chain to the eighteenth in the series, amounts to:

Postage	$3,377,129,294,182,482.00
Stationery	844,282,323,545,620.50
	$4,221,411,617,728,102.50

This inconceivable amount will have been reached at completion of the eighteenth series of letters.

To express the amount for the thirty-sixth series would be beyond conventional modes of expression.

GERMANY AND THE LEAGUE.

From the Courier-Journal.

LORD ROBERT CECIL, in urging the League of Nations to admit Germany, is inspired by the fear that Europe is settling back into the condition that existed prior to 1914; that is, into two great combinations of Powers organized against each other. Forcefully he argues that unless Germany is accepted as a logical fellow of Great Britain, France and Italy it will seek its natural companionship elsewhere. Just now Germany would be glad to receive an invitation to join the league. Many overtures have been made in that direction, but the league has not seen fit to recognize them. Meantime, Berlin has witnessed the admission of its former allies, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria, into the league. Thus, since there has been no rule against admitting former enemies of the Entente, it is plain there has been a deliberate purpose against the nonadmission of Germany. This purpose can hardly arise from anything except post-war rancor, an influence to which the league is subjected only because its component members possess that rancor. The spirit of the league itself is opposed to prejudice. It is designed to be all embracing and to be judicious and unpreferential in its attitude toward individual nations. Lord Robert Cecil's mission, therefore, is to induce league members to abate their prejudices against German admission in behalf of Europe's larger good. The most prominent of these is France. Yet for France to take an uncompromising stand against German admission, as Lord Robert points out, is a short-sighted and fruitless way of dealing with the case.

OUR TRADE WITH EUROPE.

From the World's Work.

A GREAT truth the economists have been attempting to instill into the popular mind for more than a century with not much apparent success; that commerce is essentially barter, that it consists of an interchange of products; that the country which has nothing to sell will have no ability to buy; that tariffs and subsidies will not provide these commodities, but that only the energies and resourcefulness of the trader will do so. It is because the world has not yet grasped this great truth that the present economic and political confusion prevails. At present Congress is attempting to restore American trade with Europe by erecting a tariff wall against European products, ignoring the principle that Europe must pay for our goods only with goods of her own. It is demanding that Europe pay the interest upon the large debt owed the United States, forgetting again that our late allies can pay this interest only with their products. In Europe itself the same misapprehension prevails. France demands reparations in full from Germany, but Germany can pay these sums only by work, and work in the form of manufactured articles. Incalculable mischief is being caused by the failure to understand this simple truth.

MEMBERS OF SHIP CREW TAKE SHORT RATIONS TO FEED BABY

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—A tale of the sea, a becalmed ship, a starving and half-insane crew, and a mother with a new-born baby to preserve whose life everyone else sacrificed rations, thrilled the water front here yesterday, upon the arrival of the motor craft Annie Johnson, with news of the San Francisco schooner, William H. Smith, which is expected in port soon. The schooner was becalmed in the Pacific for 43 days and was discovered on Aug. 14 when Capt. Murray of the Johnson responded to her signals of distress and provided her with supplies. The crew of seven men had been 11 days almost without food except the copra with which the schooner was loaded.

Mrs. Rosena Speiser Dies.

Mrs. Rosena Speiser, 93 years old, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Hoffman, 8112 South Broadway, yesterday morning, of the infirmities of age. Mrs. Speiser had been active until a few days ago. She was born in Germany, and came to this country in 1882, a year after the death of her husband, Frederick, settling in St. Louis. Her daughter, Mrs. Hoffman, 60 years old, is the only surviving child. The funeral will be from the residence at 2 p. m. tomorrow, burial following in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery.

Society News

Announcement has been made by Miss Emily Borie Hartshorne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Yarnall Hartshorne of the Oakley road, Haverford, Pa., of the plans for her wedding to Dr. Stuart Mudd of Boston, formerly of St. Louis, son of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey G. Mudd of 47 Vandeventer place. The ceremony will be performed at the Church of the Redeemer in Bryn Mawr, Pa., Sept. 12, by the Rev. Francis Cope Hartshorne of Phenixville, Pa., an uncle of the bride, assisted by the Rev. George Calvert Carter, rector of the Church of the Redeemer. Following the ceremony there will be a large reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hartshorne.

Dr. Mudd and his fiancee have selected a large bridal party to accompany them to the altar. The list follows: Miss Esther Burns Weston of Philadelphia, a cousin of the bride, maid of honor; Miss Mary Rhodes Dodge of New York, Miss Carol Lawrence of Catawmet, Mass.; Miss Laura Carter of New York, Miss Venette Willard of Merion, Pa.; Miss Anne C. Sharp of Berwyn, Pa., and Miss Margaret Wiener of Germantown, Pa., bridesmaids.

Dr. Mudd's cousin, Seeley Greenleaf Mudd, of Los Angeles, Cal., will serve as best man, and the ushers will be Boudinot B. Atterbury of New York, Stuart Benson Clark of Zanesville, O.; John Shepley, Silas McKinley and Samuel Becker Grant of St. Louis; Russell Wood of New Bedford, Conn.; Dr. Isaac Starr Jr. of Philadelphia, Charles Hartshorne of Phenixville, Pa.; Charles H. Weston, Department of Justice, Washington, D. C., and Herald Weston of St. Huberts, N. Y.

On the evening preceding the wedding, Miss Hartshorne, Dr. Mudd and the entire bridal party will be honored at a dinner to be given at the Merion Golf Club, Haverford, Pa., by Mr. and Mrs. S. Burns Weston, uncle and aunt of the prospective bride. The affair will follow the wedding rehearsal.

Miss Dorothy May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn F. May of 705 Interdrive avenue, will be married tomorrow morning to Edward F. Bokern, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Bokern, 2931 Allen avenue. The ceremony will take place at the Church of Immaculate Conception at 10 o'clock and will be followed by a wedding breakfast for the bridal party and members of the two families at the Missouri Athletic Association.

Miss May was educated at Hosmer Hall. Mr. Bokern is an alumnus of the University of Illinois and a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. During the war he served as an ensign in the navy. The couple will make their home in St. Louis.

Mrs. T. A. Meysenburg of 5 Westmoreland place is in Colorado Springs, Colo. She has spent the summer touring the West and will visit on the Eastern coast before returning home.

Judge and Mrs. William Dee Becked of 5564 Delmar boulevard have taken possession of their new suite in the Sayoy Apartments, Union and Delmar boulevards. Judge and Mrs. Becker have recently returned from their summer home at Mantrap, Minn. Mrs. Becker and her two children returned by train, while Judge Becker and Julius Koehler, who has been their guest, made the trip by motor. En route to St. Louis Judge Becker and Mr. Koehler spent a day at Locksley Lodge, Waupaca, Wis.

Mrs. Wynne Evans of 4418 West Pine boulevard, who, with her family, are occupying the Evans cottage at Macatawa, Mich., has as her guest Mrs. Rush Heed of Chicago, formerly of St. Louis.

Misses Marguerite and Frances York, daughters of Mrs. F. B. York of 5214 Washington boulevard, who have been at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for a fortnight, will leave there this week, to be guests at the Traymore Hotel, in Atlantic City. Later they will go to New York, returning to St. Louis the latter part of September.

Miss Margaret Crenshaw of 5953 Enright avenue, has as her guest, Miss Ollene Andreason of Elgin, Ill. The visitor and her hostess are members of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority at the University of Illinois.

Miss Crenshaw gave a luncheon Wednesday in honor of her guest. Those present were Mmes. Loren Murchison, M. Nordgreen, Charles Lafferty and the Misses Conway, Keitel, Linkey, Moll and the honor guest.

Judge and Mrs. William Killoren are registered at the Grand Hotel, Mackinac Island, Mich. Mrs. Killoren was, before their marriage last week, Miss Emma Henry.

An out-of-town wedding which is just being made known in St. Louis is that of Mrs. Marita H. Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Hodgman of 5736 Clemens avenue, and Richard Maxwell Ott of Boston, which took place June 21 in Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Ott are residing in a new home in Newton, Mass., a suburb of Boston.

Mrs. Jay Bee Lewis of Waco, Tex., who has been the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. C. Spencer Meredith, 4926 Laclede avenue, departed Saturday for her home. Mrs. Lewis recently came to St. Louis from New York, where she spent several months with her son, Lieutenant-Commander Spencer S. Lewis, aid to Vice Admiral McDonald, U. S. N., and Mrs. Lewis.

"THE MASQUERADER" A STIRRING FILM

Guy Bates Post, one of the finest living actors, gives a screen interpretation of "The Masquerader" which does not suffer by comparison with the stage version of the play which he made famous. The picture is being shown at the New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters this week. Some of Post's magnetism is lost in the transposition from stage to screen, and, of course, his splendid voice is missed, but the film has scenic advantages, and, more important, it enables Post to play the dual role throughout.

The scenario follows the play rather than the novel from which the play was adapted. John Chilcote, representative of an illustrious house, is allowing his brilliant Parliamentary career to go by default, because of his addiction to drugs. His cousin, John Loder, an obscure but ambitious journalist, is Chilcote's double. Chilcote covets Loder's obscurity, freedom and irresponsibility, and Loder is jealous of Chilcote's opportunities for great things. So they exchange places.

There are interesting complications, for Chilcote has a wife; moreover, he has many intimate friends whom Loder fails to recognize. Nevertheless, each gets what he wants—Loder delivers the speech on Belgium which wins England over to the war, he becomes an indispensable man to the Government, and he falls in love with Mrs. Chilcote. Chilcote, on the other hand, gets what he wants—morphine and quiet.

In addition to "The Masquerader" the three theaters are showing a film of close up and action pictures of the Browns, in connection with still pictures of the pennant winning Browns of more than 30 years ago.

One of Marie Corelli's weird stories was drawn upon for "The Young Diana," the feature picture offering at the Missouri Theater with Marion Davies as the star. It is unreal and at times uncanny, but there are some beautiful settings and Miss Davies is seen in a bewildering succession of magnificent gowns. By way of contrast to this sartorial display she is seen through part of the action as a prim and severely plain spinster. This is to pave the way for a startling transformation scene in which a doctor who has been flirting with black magic restores her youth and beauty. One of the brilliant episodes is a skating carnival where the rejuvenated Diana makes her first public appearance, astounding those who knew her in her youth and had seen her pass into unattractive spinsterhood. The picture serves well in exploiting the beauty of Miss Davis and is good midsummer entertainment.

On the Missouri program also is a showing of close-up and motion pictures of the St. Louis Browns baseball team. Another added feature is a stage singing and dancing diversion called "Bits of Broadway."

Youth Hurt on Swimming Pool Slide.

Arnold Binder, 18 years old, of 3308 Miami street, fell on the slide into the swimming pool at Manion's Park, 3614 South Broadway, yesterday, suffering injuries to both hips. He was taken to the Missouri Pacific Hospital. The police reported Binder caught hold of a guard rail three feet high at the top of the slide, intending to swing himself clear into the water. He landed 12 feet below, near the bottom of the slide, instead of the water.

ENDS LIFE WITH POISON AFTER SHOOTING AT ROOMERS

Adolph Vierling, 49 years old, a widower, was found dead in his room at 2908½ Easton avenue at 2 a. m. yesterday from poison a short time after he had fired two shots from a revolver at a party of roomers in the same house, who had returned from an outing at Alton, Ill., with Mrs. Jennie Reed, proprietor of the rooming house. The shots went wild.

When Mrs. Reed, with James Wear and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Boecker, opened the front door, Vierling, they reported, greeted them from the top of the stairs.

"This is a fine time to be getting in," he remarked, and fired the shots. He then went to his room and locked the door. Mrs. Reed heard him groaning a few minutes later and called the police, who broke in the door. Vierling was found unconscious on the bed and an empty glass, which had contained a quick poison, was on the floor. Vierling was dead when a patrol wagon arrived with him at the city hospital.

Mrs. Reed told the police Vierling was a range maker and had roomed at her home for two and a half years.

SAYS BOY ROBBER TOOK AUTO

Paul L. Meyer of 6464 Scanlan avenue reported to the police he had been stopped at 2 a. m. yesterday at Laclede and Gravois roads by a youth who jumped on the running board of his car and shoved a revolver into his side. He was made to get out of the car, he said, and robbed of his watch, ring, tie pin and $1.50, after which the robber drove away in the car.

He reported that he walked into a saloon near the scene and asked where he could find an officer. Three young men, he said, drew revolvers, made him stand beside the bar while they backed out of the saloon and disappeared.

WHAT DID YOU SEE TODAY?

Volunteer Reporters Tell the Post-Dispatch of the Interesting, Unusual and Often Humorous Incidents They Encounter.

"DEAR MR. EDITOR," writes a woman living on Rutger street, "I have been waiting anxiously to see some of the six What-Did-You-See incidents I have sent in. I am sure some of mine were as good as some I have seen printed. Do you just pick out 30 every day and throw the rest away?"

This writer has one element of success—confidence in the quality of her own work. Her positive tone leads the editor to share her belief and to lament his own error in rejecting her matter—if he did reject it. There is a possibility that one or more of her contributions is still awaiting publication—for the fact is, replying to the question, that more letters are picked out daily than are printed, and that a reserve has accumulated. This is a condition familiar to magazine contributors, who often get notices that their stories or verses have been accepted, then wait several months for their publication and the consequent remittance. However, the What-Did-You-See editor cannot undertake to notify contributors as to acceptances—not while the letters are coming in at the rate of more than 500 a day, as they did the first five days of last week.

A STIMULANT.

F. X. FITZPATRICK,

FAST COLORS.

A friend of mine came home the other evening, and sat down to read his paper. His wife came in the room and screamed. She pointed to his face, and the man looked in the mirror. His face was a bright red. He remembered he had washed his face at work, drying it on a red pocket handkerchief. He had wondered why people were staring at him in the car.

OLIVETTE SCHIMPF,
4972 Eichelberger avenue.

STOLE FOR NOTHING.

The stranger, with hunger-drawn face, leaned over the grocery store counter, and when the proprietor wasn't looking, purloined a package of cereal and put it under his coat. As he turned to make a stealthy departure, he saw the groceryman put up a sign over the array of packages which read, "Free Samples."

SAM BANIT,
2924 Sheridan avenue.

CALL A TAXI.

A woman sat in a department store waiting to make some purchases. Suddenly she sprang to her feet and cried out. A floorwalker ran up and asked her what was the matter. "My icebox!" she exclaimed. "I forgot to empty the pan."

HELEN ROTH,
2119 Gravois avenue.

INTRODUCTION.

A girl got on a Grand car, closely followed by a young man. Both sat down on opposite sides of the aisle. An elderly man who was sitting with the girl, got up, and motioned for the young man to come over and sit down beside the girl. The youth, as well as the maid, was quite embarrassed. They did not know each other. The man thought they were companions, I presume.

MRS. P. H. McGAULEY,

TRAPPING NOTE.

One of my neighbors bought a heavy steel trap such as are used by hunters to catch bears. He explained that he was going to set it for a burglar who had been trying to break into his garage.

A. ULBRICH, 2847 Lyon st.

WATCH YOUR HAT.

A shopper in a department store thoughtlessly laid her expensive straw hat on a table bearing the sign "All hats on this table $2." Two negro women, bargain hunting, chanced along and one of them pounced upon the hat. Removing her own hat, she proceeded to try on the "bargain" before a mirror, announcing, 'I shoo am goin' to buy this here hat." Just then the owner of the hat discovered its whereabouts and started toward the negro woman. I did not wait to see the rest.

LAVINIA MUSICK,
5916 Plymouth avenue.

CARRIED A KICK.

I saw a horse going down the street tied to the tailgate of a wagon. A red rag was tied to his tail to indicate danger.

ROY RICHRATH, 1612 Belt av.

A PEDESTRIAN HINT.

I saw a man in hiker's outfit on Olive street the other day. On his back was a sign reading, "Walking to San Francisco—Please Give Me a Ride."

JACK M. McRAE,

CALL BEN TURPIN.

I saw a pie-smashing worthy of the comic screen, when a young woman, at a picnic, just lifting a piece of cream pie to her mouth, was struck by an indoor baseball. The pie was spread all over her face.

F. WEFFERLING,
3868A California avenue.

NEXT!

I was on my vacation in the country, and a man came into the town barber shop to get shaved. The electric light power is turned off at 10 p. m., and it was almost that hour when the shaving began. The man had half his face shaved when the lights went out, and he had to depend on kind friends to hold burning papers twisted into torches until he had been shaved.

OPAL ENLOE,

POPULAR POLICEMAN.

J. THIROLF,
5307 Geraldine avenue.

OFF AND ON.

I saw a woman get off the front door of a Broadway car, intending to transfer to a Lee car, at Broadway and Chippewa. The Lee car was right behind, and the woman started to run, and, not noticing, she got on the rear end of the car she had just got off.

MISS FORSTER,
3112 Keokuk street.

A MELTING AFFECTION.

I saw a couple enter an ice cream parlor, order a chocolate newport and a banana split, sit and talk for 40 minutes, get up and walk out, leaving the ice cream almost untouched. MISS MARIE LINDSEY, 4026 Easton avenue.

SUPERSTITIOUS BARGAINING.

A lady priced a dress in an apparel store, and when she was told the dress was $12, said she would buy if the price were reduced to $12.98. The floorwalker said the woman could have the dress, and that he would pay the other 2 cents out of his own pocket.

C. UNGER,

Recommend Resinol to that friend with skin trouble

If you have a friend suffering with eczema or other itching, burning eruption, what greater kindness could you do him than to say:

"Why don't you try Resinol? I know you have experimented with a dozen treatments, but I believe Resinol is different. It does not claim to be a 'cure-all'—simply a soothing, healing ointment, free from all harsh drugs, that physicians prescribe widely in just such cases as yours. Do get a jar today!"

"Q"

By KATHARINE NEWLIN BURT

CHAPTER VI.

Concerning Loves and Hatreds.

THE morning after the storm, Mary's pupil was late for the first time: It was half-past eleven before she opened the door in reply to the shattering peal that was his usual announcement.

"Now I am going to scold you!" she said, and there was really a fine crease of annoyance between her brows. She was completely absorbed in the education of the "golderndest ignorantest growed white man in the U-nited States," and she begrudged those wasted ninety minutes.

"I'm plumb ashamed of myself," said Q, and it was the only excuse he gave.

"You have so very much to learn," sighed Mary as they took their places on either side of the table, "and so short a time to learn it in. You need every second you can give to study? Now you have lost nearly two hours!"

"You had ought to lick me, lady."

For the first time his schoolmarm failed to return Q's smile, and this alarmed and distressed the Westerner more than anything she could have said. He gave her a quick, scared look and fell to work with overpowering seriousness.

In the middle of his reading-lesson, however (he was engaged on page 18 of a primer and was spelling out

"Run, girls and boys,
Jump, boys and girls.
Run to the tree, boys,
Run to me, girls"—

quite as if he meant every word of it, especially the last sentence, which he delivered with an indescribably laughable drawl), he interrupted himself to say,

"After I run away from the folks that treated me so bad, I wasn't never licked but once."

Mary, minded to reprove him, looked up to see a white face and eyes that blazed quite through her.

Instantly she forgot everything except the spectacle. "When was that?" she asked in a very low voice, holding herself as still as though she were afraid of him.

"I was a boy of 12 or thereabouts. A big rich feller come to the cow camp. He was half boss of the hull outfit. We boys was ridin' the range on his pay, but he didn't often come nigh the camps. This time he happened in on his way to one of the main ranches and he brung his boy. He was an awful plump kid, dressed up stylish in store clothes. Well, sir, he wore a kind of a strip-ed shirt with a stiff collar and he had on a straw hat. A straw hat with a blue-and-white strip-ed ribbon all about it. Yes, ma'am, it sure had that kind of ribbon. Fer-di-nand was his name. It was my job to entertain him. I was real po-lite to him, ma'am. I sure was, till he called me a name. It w.s a right nasty name, and I lighted into him. He was bigger'n me and not so soft as you'd think to look at him. He was about two years older. But I was lickin' him all right when he began to holler, 'Popper! Popper!' like as if I'd been wattlin' him. Well, sir, Popper he came through the willows like a cow moose, and he tuk me by what I called my collar and havin' his ridin' switch handy, he gave me the gol-derndest lickin' you ever need to think about. There weren't any Popper 'round fer me to holler to, so I held my tongue. All the while the Fer-di-nand kid stood by kind of pipin'. That's right, Popper, you better give it to him. You teach him not to be so free with his fists.'"

Q's eyes came slowly back to the vision of Mary's face. "Some day," he said, "I'm agoin' to find that young feller and pay him back on that lickin' and some to spare."

There was a hard brown fist lying on the primer and Mary impulsively put her hand over it.

"Don't be revengeful, Mr. Q," she said softly; "you're too big a man to remember a thing like that."

He started under her touch, looked down at the hand and then at her again. Mary took the hand away.

"I pay off what's owed," said Q grimly, "if that's bein' revengeful. I never have spoken about that lickin' before to anyone. But I ain't never forgot it. It kept me layin' awake all that night. I don't hate many folks. But I sure hate that Fer-di-nand kid. And I'm sure goin' to pass on that lickin'."

"But—you wouldn't know him if you saw him. You were boys. Do you know his last name?"

"Fadden," said Q. "He was brung up in the East and he lives hereabouts. Fer-di-nand Fadden."

"Hatin' is queer," Q went on slowly; and added with apparent irrelevance, "I've knowed some almighty fine does, though."

Mary stared, then remembered abruptly that she was a schoolmarm.

"I shall have to invent some sort of punishment for you," she said. "You've been talking for 10 minutes."

"You hadn't ought to listen to me, ma'am."

She colored at his tone. "After this, I won't. And I've thought of a punishment. You must tell me all over again what you've just told me, and you must put it into perfect English."

"O, Gawd Almighty!" ejaculated Q, and spent another five minutes in abject apology for his oath. But he had to tell his story again, painfully and perfectly. And even the last sentence was remembered and "served up cold," as Q expressed it.

"I have known," he had to say, "some very fine doctors," and burst out laughing for the first time in Mary's experience of him.

He left her, as usual, flushed and pleasantly excited, feeling that the shadow had been lifted from her day. She hung for a long time over the page of his writing lesson, a proverb, written down neatly in her own straight letters at the top of the page and painfully repeated in his big hand. Her face as it read down the lines was more like the face of a youthful mother than that of a schoolmarm. When she looked up at the sound of the tiny clock striking modestly between the globes, the shadow fell again.

And yet, those days of Mary's over which the shadow lay were tranquil and serene enough. In the morning she would prepare the breakfast, a coffee-toast-and-marmalade meal, and then she would go over the tiny house and make it shine—this before the appearance of her pupil. After lessons, there was lunch to be cooked, which she brought on a tray to her father's elbow, where he wrote at a desk in a dim corner of the Grinscoombe Free Library half a block away. In the afternoon, he came home and slept very quietly and neatly in a chair. He worked a very little with a gentle air of detachment in the vegetable garden. The workingman's house had a workingman's back yard. And then, Mary would call him in to supper with that tender and anxious softening of her voice which amounted almost to a brogue. So far, certainly, the day would have been serene; Mary would have mended and read and walked and prepared Q's lesson for tomorrow. At supper the little father would be quietly gay and Mary almost feverishly so. She would entertain her father, her father would entertain her; it was a dialogue well worth the listening to, and not in the least like the usual family mumble or clatter, rather pathetically unlike it. Even after the meal, while she was washing up the dishes, Mary would keep up her talk—until it would suddenly falter into silence. In the midst of her story or his sophism, the little father would have tiptoed away, slunk out of his house, and down the street like a quivering piece of twilight.

Then Mary, looking 30 years instead of 24, would move about the little lonely house, or try to read or sit with her head in her hands until a late, late hour, when she would stand up and, holding her head high, would walk quickly down the side street and along the main one. Her fingers would be cold and her throat tight, but if, by an unlucky chance, there were an acquaintance to be met, Mary would smile and wave her hand pleasantly as though she were going for a stroll. So—to a certain brightly lighted corner where from a swinging door stumbled and wavered a helpless little figure, to whom Mary went straight and took its arm and guided its zigzag course toward home. Her cheeks burned and her eyes smarted, but she had still the air of taking a pleasant stroll with her "Papa"—this for the benefit of that possible belated acquaintance who, if met with, greeted Mary with lowered eyes and passed her quickly by. The pity of the averted looks smote her pride like a blow.

It was one night, not very long after that lesson in which Mary had inflicted punishment, when Q. T. Kinwydden, swinging with his lithe-hipped stride along Main street, bore down upon the pair. His eyes, trained to observation and wise in such humanities, read the tragedy and its heroism at a glance and he, too, smiled and passed by. But in an instant he was back again. He lifted his hat and took Mr. Grinscoombe's arm.

"No use you lookin' at me, ma'am," he said, very low, very grim, very gentle, "I'm agoin' to see you through this."

He saw them to the porch of the little house and up the steps and, because Mary here bade him a tremulous good-night, he did not see them any farther. But he sat on the top step of the porch that needed painting so badly and, with the ears of a forest beast, he heard the dreadful stumbling up the stairs and Mary's coaxing voice as she got her charge into bed and, afterwards, her lagging step down the stairs. At the foot she seemed to pause and soon there came the pitiful low sound of her sobbing.

For five minutes Q sat and swore to himself with eloquence; when he was not able to think of a fresh oath, he stood up, opened the door, and, seeing through the dimness, he took himself straight to Mary huddled on the lowest step with her head down on her knees. There was no room for him to sit beside her on the narrow step, so he squatted on his heels as cowboys squat on their high-heeled boots about a round-up fire and put his hand over hers that were cold and wet with tears.

"You've got to let me in on this, ma'am," he said; "you've got to let me in."

In the overwhelming darkness within and without, his voice seemed to break down something in Mary's heart. For the first time in her life, she let in upon her trouble the warmth of human sympathy. She sobbed her story to Q and her fingers clung to the kind, warm iron of his hand.

"He is such a darling," she began, "and he is such a fine man altogether. I love him so. You wouldn't guess, Q dear—" she had always called him Mr. Kinwydden before—"what a heart he has, nor what a head of wit and learning and wisdom. He has genius. It's the way those brutes have treated him! The cowards! The devils! Oh, all because he was so much finer and braver than any of them could possibly understand. When he was a very young man, not much more than a boy and living up there at the house you visit, Q.—Grinscoombe Manor, a son of old Mr. Grinscoombe, an own brother of that Miss Selda Granscoombe — indeed, yes, Q, he is!— he was just a sensitive, warm-hearted boy and he lost his heart and his head over a pretty little Irish maid-servant. I really think she was the first creature that ever showed a human interest and understanding toward him. She was very young herself then and—and rash and generous. Q—when he found the wrong his passion had done her—" Mary faltered. "Do you understand?"

"I savvy, ma'am; 't was because of some such wrong-doin's somewhere that my mother left me with the folks that treated me so bad—and that I growed up without a name."

"Yes," cried Mary eagerly, "and it's just what my father wouldn't do! He married the little Irish servant girl and his family turned him out. Old Mr. Grinscoombe never spoke to him again. He showered everything on Francis, his other son, and when Francis died, after a very creditable marriage and the birth of a very creditable daughter, then he gave everything to my Aunt Selda—though I've never called her that to her face, mind you; and in his will he left her everything, the money and the mills and the old home my father loved so. I don't know why Papa never went away from here. He just stayed and worked a little and wrote his wonderful book." Here Mary straightened and Q felt her excited grip tighten on his hand. "No one will ever read his wonderful book," she said. "I've sent it to lots of publishers. I typed it all, myself—pages and pages of it, and I've made fresh copies, but they won't read it. I know, because I put a hair between the pages and it always comes back not a bit disturbed. I think it must be because of the first two chapters which are rather vague and wandering; they don't catch your attention, though I never dared to tell him so. But—later on—it's full of wit and humor—and quaint—and it's very wise. Darling Papa! Do you know what his name for himself was, Q?—even when he was a little boy, and doesn't it show how those Grinscoombes"—she ground out the hated name as though it had not been her own—"must have treated him! 'The Earthworm,'—that's what he called himself. And he called his book—'The Philosophy of an Earthworm.' When you get your education, you must read it."

"Yes, ma'am," said Q gently.

She was sitting up straight and the tears had stopped. Now she drooped again.

"It was after my mother's death — and, Q, the passion was love, the very best and most patient love, and it was when he was so poor and my brother was sick, and we couldn't pay Dr. Sales' bill, that Papa began to—to drink." She had never said this of him before and it made her tremble to say it. "I—we tried so hard to keep him away. And then we'd take turns bringing him home until Harry wouldn't let me do it any more. But Harry went to New York to work and, afterwards, he came home very, very ill. And died——

That was Mary's story. Q listened to it. Except for the two answers she had called for, he made no comments. After the story was told, he pushed a beautiful clean white linen handkerchief marked Q. T. K. by a very expensive linen merchant on Fifth avenue into Mary's lap and she laughed and blew her nose.

No other man she had ever known or ever would know, perhaps, could have comforted her so sanely and so surely as did this queer pupil of hers.

"Say," he murmured reasonably, "lots of fellers takes their drink and goes home on a crooked trail and none the worse for it. He's sure a real gentleman. But it ain't a lady's business rightly. You let me see to it. I sure know the inside ways of a bar. Lady, likely, if your Pa had a friend who would drink with him, he'd be hittin' the home trail when that friend kissed his glass good-night. I ain't averse to a drink, nights, seems more homelike to me, sort of. Will you let me take up this claim, lady?"

She could only thank him; it was hope, a gleam under the old bridge of her care. All the little shadowed ripples brightened.

After he had left her, she kissed the handkerchief marked Q. T. K. Also, she kept it. And she has it yet.

After-Dinner Tricks

No. 207—A Friendly Joke.

When someone makes light of your tricks or causes other annoyance, state that you will perform an extremely difficult feat of jugglery. Procure a glass of water and a cane or umbrella. Announce that you can hold the tumbler against the ceiling with the point of the cane and upon removing the cane catch the tumbler in its fall without spilling a drop of water.

To demonstrate the trick hand your victim the cane. Then stand on a chair and hold the mouth of the tumbler against the ceiling. Ask the victim to set the point of the cane against the bottom of the glass, and hold it there until you get down from the chair and can take it from him. He complies with the request, but when you step down, simply pick up the chair, carry it away and sit down in it, leaving the spectator holding the tumbler in its awkward position. He cannot get out of his predicament without crying for help, or without taking great chances of breaking the glass.

Frightening Children

By WINIFRED BLACK

DR. WILLIAM PALMER LUCAS of the University of California says that fear is often the greatest setback a child has in his development. Dr. Lucas spoke at Seattle the other day to an organization of nurses, and the things he said to those nurses about women who frighten children in order to control them would have made the ears of some careless grownups turn a deep purple.

Hurrah for Dr. Lucas! If he never says another thing as long as he lives, he has said enough right now to make all who love children and understand them remember him as long as they live.

"The policeman will get you—if you say that."

"The bogey-man will catch you."

"The black dog will bite you."

"The tall ghost will come after you."

What kind of a world is this for children to live in when people say such things as these to them?

Every coward and every fool who ever lived loves to frighten other people. If he can't frighten a man or a woman, he'll frighten a child, and if he can't do that, he'll try to scare a dog or a cat, or sneak up on a nervous, high-strung horse and make him jump and rear and tremble—if he can.

It makes the coward or the fool feel important and powerful—that's why he does it.

In After Years.

Children who are easily frightened are almost always children of brains. People with no imagination are stolid and not easily moved.

It takes a sensitive nervous system to be shaken to the core by the antics or the stories of some ignorant nobody who wants to buy a little brief importance by terrorizing a child.

If I caught any nursemaid of mine frightening one of my children I'm afraid I should do my very best to do a little frightening myself.

I'd rather employ a thief or a drunkard to take care of my child than to pay someone who would think it funny to scare a child into obedience by threatening him with a policeman, or a bogey-man or a black dog or a tall ghost, or anything else that might come in handy.

What a terrible thing it is to take the sensitive plate of a young child's mind and etch upon it some image of terror that will follow him and dwarf him and hamper him as long as he lives.

I know a grown man, a man of courage and character, who told me once that it took him years to train himself to pass a graveyard in the dark alone, because an ignorant nurse had told him ghost stories when he was little.

We didn't know what was the matter with the woman who was ill when she kept shivering in her delirium and screaming about the black dog. But when she was well again she told us that all the time she was ill she dreamed that she was a little girl and that the black dog which was hidden behind the lilac bush in their old garden at home was jumping out at her and trying to catch her. To this day that woman trembles from head to foot if the most harmless dog in the world comes anywhere near her.

A Fine "Gift."

Of course, there wasn't any black dog behind the lilac bush at all. An older cousin who was spending the summer with the family just told her that tale to have the "fun" of frightening her. Fine gift to leave behind her as a memento, wasn't it?

As for the mothers who scare their children to make them "be good"—well, if I couldn't bring up a little, loving, sensitive child and make it be good without scaring it, I would give up my job and be done with it then and there.

Reddy Tries the Old Trick

By Thornton W. Burgess

A thing may ancient be to you
Yet to another still be new.
—Reddy Fox.

REDDY FOX was a very hot and tired Fox when he reached the railroad. He had run hard and fast to get there well ahead of Bowser the Hound. The point at which he reached the railroad was close to a bridge which crossed a wide stream. There were two things Reddy could do; he could run along beside the track for a short distance and then walk on one of the rails back the way he had come and keep right on until it was safe to jump off. The rail would not hold his scent. Bowser naturally would think he had kept on going in the other direction.

The other thing he could do—and this was the old trick Granny Fox had taught him—was to wait until Bowser was almost to him, and that train which he could hear coming was also almost to him. Then he could race at top speed across that bridge ahead of the train and jump off the track just as soon as he was safely across. Bowser might be so eager at sight of Reddy that he would not notice that oncoming train and would try to follow Reddy across that bridge. Then the train might catch him and throw him down into the water. Reddy had known that trick to work with young dogs. He hoped that it was so long since that trick had been tried on Bowser that Bowser would have forgotten all about it.

Reddy thought over the two plans and decided to try the old one. If Bowser should be killed it wouldn't be his fault. At least, that is what Reddy told himself. "If Bowser isn't smart enough to look out for trains it is no fault of mine," said Reddy to himself. "Of course, I don't want him killed, but if he should be by accident I shouldn't cry about it. There he comes now! And there comes the train!"

Reddy sat beside the track just as long as he dared to. By this time the train was quite near. So was Bowser the Hound. Bowser looked up and saw Reddy. That was what Reddy wanted. Reddy turned and started to cross that bridge. He remembered how frightened he had been the first time Granny Fox had led him across that bridge. Then she had told him not to look down and after that Reddy had never been afraid. So now he did not look down. He looked straight ahead and ran for all he was worth. The roar of that train was in his ears. It drowned the voice of Bowser the Hound, and Reddy did not dare to look back to see if Bowser was behind him. He thought he was, for Bowser had been almost at his heels when he started and had seemed to be paying no attention to that train. You see, Reddy had counted on Bowser being so excited at being so close to him that he would notice nothing else.

My! how fast that train came! Reddy began to wonder if he had waited too long. The very thought gave him new strength. The engine whistled, and that startled Reddy so that he nearly tumbled off the bridge. But he didn't, and ran even faster. A few more feet would bring him to the end of the bridge and safety. Could he make it in time? Reddy fairly flew, as the saying is.

CABBAGE LEAF ROLL

ONE cup raw chopped mutton, two tablespoons fat, one-third cup rice, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one head cabbage, one lemon, two teaspoons salt.

Put cabbage leaves of suitable size into boiling water and let them stand until they are wilted. Mix the remaining ingredients (with the exception of the lemon) and form into rolls, each containing about one tablespoon of the mixture. Wrap each roll in a cabbage leaf, after removing the thicker part of the stem in order to make it roll well. Pack these rolls closely into a baking dish and cover with water or stock. Bake for one-half hour. Just before serving squeeze the juice of the lemon over the rolls.

Mrs. Mary Blaker, England's only woman town crier, performs her duties wearing a picturesque coat and cocked hat similar to the uniform of Colonial soldiers.

PURSUIT

In the still midnight sped the slim,

It was the evening of May Hesketh's picnic supper, small but memorable; and now the clocks, had there been any on the island, would have pointed close to midnight. What was so rare as this night in June? Sailing wisps of cloud shredded the face of the high moon; the blackness of the woods, the glades and dells, the vine-covered rocks and the empty quarry, were stippled and patched with silver; the lake was a sheet of silver stretching far away to lose itself in a lovely dusk. Through the verdure, a soft breeze whispered; from the water floated voices of the merrymakers, receding; and the woman stealing on light feet up the path, a slim and not incongruous figure in her white bathing-dress, with unbound dark hair streaming to her waist, reflected that, for an hour at least, she would be alone here.

But it was not so. From the impenetrable shadows, as she neared the ruined cabin, the figure of a man abruptly emerged upon the path; he stood, confronting her. She started a little, and then she saw, with a wild shoot of satisfaction, that this man was her husband.

"You!"

She said with the faintly mocking air she had long ago learned for him: "But fancy meeting you here."

"You—you looked like a—" he began a little confusedly; and then, breaking off, he cleared his throat and started again, more authoritatively: "I don't say I approve of that suit, but—but it does seem to fit in with the surroundings somehow. You might almost have been mistaken—at a distance, that is—for—a hamadryad. But—"

"And what may they be? Something very nice to be mistaken for, may I hope? But I supposed you'd gone in the launch?"

"No—No. I'm tired of drunks," said he, continuing to stare at her. "And besides, swimming at night—ah—affects my sinus—as you once used to know. But you—why did you come back? You—you forgot something?"

She was smiling faintly; her dark eyes derided him.

"I almost forgot myself, if you count that! But no, in your sense, I'm not forgetful, only punitive. My sinus is sound, but my temper uncertain. So I didn't go. A sweet night, isn't it? Well!—"

"But—what is it? Why, what happened?"

"Oh, that. Yes, to be sure. I was unexpectedly kissed, you see. In the dark behind the boat-house, just as we were ready to start—oh, most ferociously, I asure you. Really that made me angry, though of course not so angry as I seemed. So I'm letting him paddle himself over alone—"

Her husband's dim heavy face seemed to darken. "Him? Who was it?"

"My dear Horace, you'll agree that kissing and telling isn't quite the act of a lady. No, no. But I'm interrupting your reverie—"

"No!—tell me!—I—I want to know."

"Your air of interest is awfully civil, Horace. But I can't really believe that you've begun at this late day to take an interest in my private life!"

Her merriment exasperated him, clearly.

"Howard Witheredge, I suppose—damn his impudence! What you can see in that—"

"Oh, name me no names, please! And the incident's really not worth mentioning—I'm merely disciplining a beau that's all. So we two have the pretty wilds all to ourselves, only think! Charmingly conjugal! But be sure I won't intrude, no, I'm off to dress—good-bye!"

"No, No. Don't go. I—"

"Ah—it seems too bad for you to miss your moonlight dip, when you enjoy it so—merely on account of the behavior of an alcoholic cad. Hem. I was about to say—I'll paddle you over to the Pulpit myself."

She eyed him quizzically, and all at once was aware of the beating of her heart.

The two stood close together, in the darkness and beauty of the woods. The man's ponderous dignity was manifestly a little strained. Why? For a long time past, indeed, it had been evident that she had undermined his case in their relationship. For weeks she had been conscious, in her withdrawals and through the silences that she had made so common between them, that he regarded her with a new attentiveness. But he had stopped there; his price—or some cowardice perhaps, had restrained him from word or act. Was it the romantic solitude now, and the sudden sight of her in her wood-nymph's guise? Was it the thought of those kisses she had just taken from another? • • • what? Into her husband's eyes had come a look she had not seen these three years; and she wondered suddenly if, here and now, beyond all calculation, her great moment had come at last.

But do you think that she would yield anything to him? Not she.

Ironically grave, she answered: "You are always kind, Horace. But of course I'd not dream of imposing on you that way."

"No imposition at all. I'd enjoy it. We find ourselves deserted—each by our own choice—what more logical than to join forces, eh?"

"Logical!"

"And—and pleasant," said he, with his labored lightness. "Why not? Or—if you don't care to join the party now—after what happened—why, we might just paddle about for awhile. The night—the night's fine," said Horace.

"Canoeing in the moonlight with one's husband! My dear man, do you want to make me the laughing stock of the county!"

Her laughter, thrilling unexpectedly, took him quite aback; stung him too, as she saw with pleasure.

"A very little of that sort of thing," said she, "and gossip would soon begin connecting our names."

"I don't think you run many risks of that," he retorted, with marked stiffness. "And I wish you'd cease this—this extravagant way of talking—it's provoking. Now come along. I—we'll enjoy it."

"On the contrary, I should die of shame."

"You're being absurd. Come!"

"A thousand thanks, but no."

There was a silence. The breeze fluttered her long hair.

"I see you actually prefer the society of drunken male flirts to that of • • • And this is typical too"——

He finished, all but impulsively for him. "I'm sure you can't realize, Laurel, how little we actually see of each other—these days."

Ah, but did she not realize?

"How little! Why, Horace—good gracious! That's literally all I can say—good gracious! Seven days a week under the same roof, but separated a single day is"——

"I know, I know!" he said in another tone, embarrassed. "It seems odd, I own—I'd hardly think it was possible. And still . . I was, of course, sure you weren't conscious of it, but"——

He hesitated, peering at her with his short-sighted eyes; and then the natural man let go a little more of the unnatural constraint.

"Why, Laurel!—you go out somewhere every evening, with or without me, or if you don't go out you have people in. At odd moments, when there are any, in the little between times, as I might term them, you're always reading, or studying, or practicing something, or else you're writing letters or you have a headache. Saturdays and Sundays and usually week-days, too, you have people staying in the house, all over the place. Noise and dancing and parties and rushing about—never a quiet moment of—of just the domestic sort!"

"You certainly make it sound different from the home life of our dear Queen! I'd no idea it was so bad as that"——

"I understand it, if anything. But—well, we won't go into it now. My point is, here, by chance, we have a quiet hour for once—charming nature and no noise—no drunks. Well, don't let's spend it strolling on these rocks. When the lake's right there. Come!"

She shook her head in silence, faintly smiling. Gently, she released the hand that he had abruptly clutched. She thought that his massive face paled a little then.

From far away over the water came the faint muffled echoes of song; the sound but accentuated the pervasive stillness. On the solitary trail, the husband and wife steadily eyed each other, and she was thrilled with the knowledge of her immeasurable victory. In that second her mind's eye flashed backward; she thought of Anders Carthew and the time and scene which had been the turning point of her life.

need to be taught"——

"No!—p—positively, you don't know me well enough for that! Please!—you brute! * * *

She managed again, though with difficulty, to free herself from those violent clutching arms. Her light airs were gone. She had thought just now that if Horace touched her she might actually hate him; it had not occurred to her that she would fear him, yet so it was. Now, as he came after her again, muscularly potent and altogether willful, panic, suddenly and unaccountably, took possession of her. Without having planned anything of the sort, she wheeled abruptly in her tracks and fled away from him.

If that was a confession of weakness, unluckily it did not settle her difficulty on the spot. With dismay she heard the large feet of Horace pounding after her down the path.

She ran as for her life.

It was a sight for the gods, no doubt. In the still midnight beneath the serene moon, in this lonely place, wildly and primitively beautiful, through the groves and among the crags sped the slim white-clad wife, dark hair flowing after; and hard behind, grunting and snorting, menacing, too, chased the heavy-built man, her husband. Different from the home life of the Queen, indeed!

On the open path, his clumsiness was equalized. She looked back, fearfully, over her shoulder; he was gaining on her, no doubt of that. Instantly she left the path, scrambling over the rough boulders which flanked it here, plunging into the copses, if such they were, bounding away through the virgin woods, surefooted as a fawn. With a wild bursting of foliage and cracking of boughs, Horace leaped after her. On the difficult terrain, her superior nimbleness gave her the advantage; the distance between them steadily widened. Once she heard his hoarse voice panting, "Stop! I tell you, stop!" Now the strange thrill of the chase, the throbbing excitement of the quarry, set her blood afire. She thought, "Pursue and love!"—and laughing frantically to herself, flew the faster. And then, as she sped across a sweet open space, a glade no doubt, powdered with bright moonlight, she glanced back again, unwisely; alas, her foot caught in a trailing vine, and she pitched to the sward. The misfortune, which wasn't rectified in a second, cost her her lead. Releasing herself, rising dizzily, she found the pursuer almost upon her—almost, but not quite. She just eluded his fingers, breathlessly dodging; she doubled and turned; and so, in a moment, suddenly, she found her feet set on the winding path again, and lo, just ahead, was the old landing, and beyond, open water.

She had forgotten the water; she welcomed the sight of it now. She was quite spent, and those resolute feet were close behind. Flying over the loose boards, the harried wife dove cleanly into the haven of the lake.

That Horace would follow her in this maneuver had not occurred to her. He was an indifferent swimmer, and his sinus, as we know, was sensitive. Never having seen him angry before, however, she had no doubt underestimated the force of his rage. In fact, the conquering male did not hesitate an instant. His ponderous body, flying out feet first, broke water hardly a second behind her own.

Unhappily for her, the lake was shallow here; a tall man could stand on the bottom and Horace was tall. In fine, while she was still submerged, her foot was roughly seized; coming up, spluttering, she found herself effectually prisoned.

Thus the man, like Neptune with a mermaid, had his way. The stars looked down upon the odd conjugal caress. Upon the woman's lips, gasping and watery, the lips of Horace, just as gasping, came waterily down. Though her heart hammered with a wild excitement, there was now no strength in her. After an instant, her feeble struggles ceased; another instant, and, marvelously, resistance seemed no longer of any importance. Under this masterful embrace, the wife's will, her whole being, indeed, seemed all at once, mysteriously, to dissolve within her.

"You witch! I will adore you forever," panted Horace wetly.

Under the impulse of his great love, the days and the weeks that followed became for the wedded pair like a new and richer honeymoon. Her elusiveness faded; her reticences and reserves, all the provocative withdrawals, learned after how much tribulation, came to seem not only superfluous, but altogether unworthy. Since Horace gave so lavishly, how inconceivably mean-spirited to dole back to him with a thrifty and calculating hand!

Willingly, young Laurel let herself go.

The new banns brought their unexperienced blessing. Now God was ready, in the old phrase, to smile upon this union. There came another June and then another, and Laurel's first child was 6 months old.

She sat in her room near the screened open window, nursing her boy, whom she had no thought of weaning as yet. The sultry afternoon was quiet. From the piazza below floated up the voice of her husband idly exchanging domestic news with his adoring mother, arrived the day before for her yearly visit; but she did not need that sound to make her remember his nearness. On the stand beside her lay a note from Howard Witheredge, who had lately "come into her life" again; she had just been thinking that nothing could be more symbolical than that.

Her name came vaguely waifting up to her.

"Laurel's stoutened," said her mother-in-law rocking comfortably, though with a touch of asthma. "It's not unbecoming to her. I think she has—settled — somehow, Horace? —She has gained in poise?"

"Yes, she's matured very much since the baby came," said Horace, and yawned a little.

"She is charming still. And a more exemplary and devoted wife I never saw. That pleases me so much. Do you know, my son," continued Mrs. Seymour suddendy, "two years ago when I was here—that spring—I was rather afraid she was drifting away from you—just a little?"

"Really! What an idea! . . . No, I remember that summer on the lake particularly," said Horace thoughtfully. "We had a wonderful time."

"Oh, it's evident enough that I was mistaken!" said his mother archly. "She absolutely worships you, that's as clear as noonday."

"Oh, yes," said Horace.

There was a little silence. Down in the pasture lot, behind the barn, the buxom new dairymaid was climbing over the stile. The lass had a trim leg. Having adjusted his glasses a little, Horace satisfied himself on that point.

"In fact, if the dear creature has a fault at all," he finished indolently, "I'd say that she loves me a little too well."

wish to know plainly:—Are you trying to say, by—all this—that you no longer love me?"

"Oh! Really!—I'm afraid I've never thought to ask myself such a question."

"Ask yourself now. I insist—it is my right."

"I am. And, Horace," she said, regarding him duskily—"honestly—I don't know the answer."

Yet in that moment, exactly, she seemed to herself to have the answer. Yes, something had gone out of her, now and forever. Funny, but you couldn't crack and make over your nature for nothing.

"Oh, you don't know?" he said darkly. "Well, the time's come for you to find out!"——

"Why? What's your interest in the ancient point? Haven't I the best authority for saying that love wasn't meant"——

"That's enough of that! I won't have this attitude any longer. Plenty of time—and kisses too, it seems—for every whipper-snapping nincompoop—nothing at all for the man you married"——

"But, my dear Horace, I can't turn myself on and off like a hot-water faucet. And the nincompoops never taught me that the heyday of romance"——

"Stop provoking me this way"——

"Willingly. Good-bye! But indeed you mustn't think of me as a stranger, Horace. I assure you I'll always think of you as among my very best friends."

His dim face became flooded with color.

"You're my wife, do you understand that!—my wife!"

"Wife is a relative term," she said a little faintly, again seeking to pass him. "But I'll leave you now."

"I'm damned if you will," said the man, in a terrible voice.

She looked up through the black trees toward the moon, an odd tune in her breast, and laughed a little.

"Your questions astound me, of course, and I'd supposed that even a wife was entitled to some privacy. Remember, Horace, I've never questioned you, though all the world has known when you've looked over the fence. But the breeze is freshening, and I've detained you long enough. Now I'll dress, waiting in the cabin"——

"Not so fast, not so fast!" said her husband, blocking her way. "we've started a conversation—we'll finish it now."

"Oh, pardon me, I thought you had finished."

"No, I've not finished! Laurel, I

Maxims of a Modern Maid

WOMEN at the summer resorts may be divided into two classes: the kind that think their home-staying husbands are "poor, lonesome boys," and the kind that know theirs are sinful scalawags.

A man is inclined to think of womanly devotion as being the emotional equivalent of the well-known brook—but even running water may change its channel and not go on forever to the same old spot.

It's ever so much pleasanter to be the enemy of a certain type of woman than to be her friend—she treats her enemies with scrupulous politeness.

When a girl marries a man old enough to be her father, he's usually rich enough to be her father, too.

A man's idea of consulting his wife's preferences is to ask, just before taking out the car, "Where shall we go tonight?"—and then to answer his own question, "We might as well drop in at the movies—they'll probably have a new comedy."

Paris divorces are almost as much in demand these days as Paris frocks—and probably almost as expensive.

When a married woman announces that she intends to "live her own life," the sooner her husband starts to live his—the better.

Charlotte Russe Mixture

ONE tablespoon granulated gelatin, ¼ cup cold water, ½ cup scalded cream, ½ cup sugar, 2 cups whipped cream, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Soften gelatin in cold water, dissolve in scalded cream, strain into a bowl and add sugar and flavoring. Set bowl in pan of ice water and beat constantly until it begins to thicken, then fold in the whipped cream, a little at a time. Turn into prepared individual molds or large mold, as preferred.

With this recipe as a basis, many variations are possible, such as the addition of nuts or fruit, the use of other flavorings as chocolate, caramel, fruit, etc. A maple nut combination is especially pleasing.

Turkish Stuffed Tomatoes

ONE-HALF pound raw mutton; two tablespoons of cooked rice; two onions, pepper, salt, chopped parsley; 12 smooth round tomatoes.

Put the meat, rice and onions through a meat grinder; season with salt, pepper, and chopped parsley; fry in a frying pan for 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Wash the tomatoes; cut a thin slice from the stem end, leaving a little of the skin for a hinge; remove the seeds and pulp and fill with meat mixture. Bake these in a pan for 20 minutes; lift out of the pan with a broad knife, and serve hot.

Fashion News Notes

PARIS.—A most amazing little frock is a coral taffeta, made with the full, gathered skirt and the plain, snug bodice which has sprung into favor this summer. The neck is rather on the Victorian order, the sleeves being no more than a narrow fold poised well below the shoulder. This gown is ornamented with three enormous roses of taffeta in shades from coral to blush. One rose is fastened at the left to the waist line, one below the right and one near the left knee. Scattered petals from the roses are sewn from waistline to hem.

LONDON.—String colored lace is being used a good deal for dress hats. This neutral tint goes with any costume and the coarse lace is very swagger. One chapeau of this sort has a foundation of drab georgette which is covered with the string-colored lace. The hat is narrow at back and front and wide at the side, the lace turning up perkily on wires to form a wing-like effect like that of a Dutch cap. The crown has a wide band of copper metallic ribbon.

PARIS.—There is a new sort of sweater. It is made of tricotine in a manner much like the sort worn by American athletes. That is to say, it is plain and snug and has a wide collar which hulls up around the ears. One sweater was in white with a collar, wide cuffs, and border around the hem of black and white perpendicular stripes. About the only thing to distinguish it from a man's sweater was a long black and white tassel on the left hip.

NEW YORK.—For afternoon wear there is a dull leather pump with the military heel which has managed to ingratiate itself in feminine affections, no matter what the occasion. The pump has the new buckles, which happen to be rather large and quite square. In bronze or dull gold they look well with this type of shoe. In general effect they are much like those worn in colonial times, or, indeed, by the favorites of the period of Louis XVI.

NEW YORK.—The autumn veils indicate that chenille dottings will continue in favor. A veiling of filet mesh has a wide border of chenille dots in a contrasting color. Thus a sand-colored mesh has dots of brown, a particularly happy combination with a little brown hat. Taupe has a dotted border of jade, or scarlet, or of turquoise. Black is dotted with white, and white with black, while there is a navy blue mesh with an intricate dotted pattern in henna.

PARIS—A chic hat intended for wear with a tailleur is a narrow-brimmed little turban in felt somewhat on the almond-green shade. It is faced with white crepe. Except for the final touch it would be a commonplace bit of headgear. But the final touch takes the shape of two very long and wide bow ends of green felt, which stands out on each side of the crown in a droll resemblance to a rabbit's ear. In the exact center of the front, holding the bow in place, is a big square buckle of jet.

The appointment of Miss Nadejda Stancioff as secretary of the Bulgarian Legation in Washington, is the first known instance of the appointment of a woman to such an important post.

In Spite of the Fact

Is woman not the mate of man
That God has made to hand in hand
Go through her life with help and cheer
To guide man on to God more near?

Then why do you say, "Yes, so, 'tis good,
"In spite of the fact that a woman should!"

Then what of the fact that woman stood,
And used her own brain as woman should
To make of this world a better place,
Outside of just her pretty lace?

Has not man fought and bled and died
And said that he would never bide
Until his liberty was won,
Until his fight for vote was done?

Has not his mate a right as well
To with her pen her music swell,
When greater thoughts have to her come,
Although she may not march to drum?

No, No, the man's voice rumbles on,
Yes, Yes, comes back the woman's song,
And woman's voice shall conquer still,
Man shall again bow to her will.

"Mary, how in the world do you always bake such fine things and how can you make a sack of flour go so far?"

"Oh, that's no trick at all! The flour itself is responsible—I use Valier's Enterprise, you know."

Four more loaves from each sack of Enterprise Flour

THE fact that a sack of Valier's Enterprise Flour costs much less than it did last year is not the only reason why it is so economical. Eight or even less cups of Enterprise go as far as nine of ordinary flour.

Enterprise Flour has concentrated strength because it is milled, as always, from only the creamy white centers of the finest, strong-gluten hard wheat.

Of course such wheat is hard to get and it costs more than ordinary wheat, but we won't use any other. We know that you would rather pay a few cents more for a sack of flour you can depend upon. Enterprise will never cause a failure

P. S. Valier's Enterprise Flour has concentrated strength. Eight or even less cups of Enterprise go as far as nine of ordinary flour. Use less flour when you bake with Enterprise.

Long Hot Sultry Days Test ones Personal Cleanliness

Warm weather demands utmost care of the body to keep it sweet and clean. Soap and water alone cannot entirely overcome the faint scent, which, perhaps unnoticed by you, may be really offensive to others.

Experts in matters of personal hygiene say that body odors, while frequently from perspiration, are often due to secretions from the sebaceous glands in the armpit. Such odors while natural are unnecessary and preventable.

Immac banishes all body odors

This fragrant snow white cream deodorant—devised by a famous chemist, harmlessly and positively neutralizes all offensive personal odor. A small amount applied with the finger tips each morning will free you of embarrassment—and prevent offense to others. Immac is not sticky or greasy, vanishes almost instantly, leaves skin white, and cannot stain or injure clothing.

Try Immac. You'll be as delighted with the results as are the thousands of steady users. You can get this dainty toilette necessity at Judge & Dolph, Wolff Wilson, Johnson Bros., Scruggs, Grand Leader, Famous-Barr, Nugents, or your neighborhood drug store. Spot Salad

A FULL SUGAR BOWL.

THERE is said to be a plot,
Mr. Smoot,
And you're sweetening the pot,
Mr. Smoot.
But from what we understand,
There's a feeling in the land
That you overplayed your hand,
Mr. Smoot.

That colossal sugar-plum,
Mr. Smoot,
Would amount to quite a sum,
Mr. Smoot.
If you boost the tariff rate
We will have to pay the freight
And must drink our coffee straight,
Mr. Smoot.

We prefer the cane to beet,
Mr. Smoot,
And your plans we must defeat,
Mr. Smoot,
When, with you, the jig is up,
There'll be sugar in the cup
When we take our morning sup,
Mr. Smoot.

SOME LUMP.

When it comes to rounding up the dough there seems to be little difference between Mormon and Mammon.

ABOU JACK SMITH.

THE scorer wrote, and vanished.
The next day
The papers told the story play by play,
And showed the names of those who batted best,

THERE'S A REASON.

"Saratoga Scratches."

"Australia Needs Only One Match"

We take it she has the papers and other ingredients.

See where Kirkwood is advertising herself in England, France and Italy. They'll soon have to put another coach on the 5:15.

"Mississippians Here To Study Dairy Methods."

"El Reno Mayor Sues Dry Head for $50,000."

Another addition to the list of famous "heads" which already includes rail, bone and dead.

Senator Smoot, who wants to place an embargo on Cuban sugar, denounces an increased duty on dyes. That's a horse of another color.

Phil Douglas says it was Leslie Mann who turned him up. Maybe he did. But thinking that one good turn deserved another he first turned him down and then turned him up.

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

REMOTE FROM THE REAL CENTERS.

DISTANCES, as someone has so aptly said, are all relative. Also, much depends upon one's point of view. There is the story of the Texas cowboy from beyond Brownsville, who made a trip to Dallas, and upon his return stated to a group of his friends that he didn't believe he'd ever go up north again—he didn't care for "the way them Yankees lived."

Also there is the little yarn relating to the Death Valley prospector who, having made a strike, paid his first visit to Chicago and indorsed the place by saying:

"She looks to me like she ought to make a permanent camp."

But of yarns of this sort the one I place first in my own gallery of standard favorites has to do with a Wyoming ranch foreman who was sent East by his employer in charge of a carload of polo ponies. He was gone four weeks. When he arrived back at the ranch he wore an air of unmistakable pleasure and relief.

"Gee," he said, "it's good to git home again. So fur as I'm concerned I don't want never to travel no more."

"What's chiefly the matter with it?"

"Oh," he said, "it's so dad blame fur frum everywhere."
